Princeton's Cinema To Return in June With Stadium Seats

While movie houses are closing all over the country —including the recent demise of tha thaaters at Mercer Mall — Princeton is looking forward to the reopening of its own downtown movie theater, The Garden. Shut down since August, hopes are now high that it will be back in business for Princeton University Reunions the first weekend in June.

The Garden is owned by the University, which announced in August ot last year that it would do a complete renovation of the 8,000 square toot building. Originally set to reopen by the end of 2000, and with a price lag of about $600,000, it will now open six months later at a cost that will surpass a million dollars.

The interior of the twin theater is still a shell. Steel posts stand where the new watts will be, and tha naw restrooms and projection room can be seen only in framing.

All those Garden patrons who had to check the health of their back after watching a movie can rejoice; the new seats will be state of the art in comfort. Afso, about 60 percent of them will be stadium seating. Tha number of seats in the two theaters will be reduced from 600 to 440.

Construction manager for The Garden is The Yedlin Company, which has managed a number ot projects at tha University as well as projects at Princeton Junior School, Princeton Theological Seminary, and Bristol-Myers Squibb. Architect is George A. Fett and interior designer is Robert Strada.

Pamela Hersh, director of community and state affairs for the University, said costs rose because the amount of work needed was not clear until the renovation was started. Charles Yedlin, Yedlin Company president, noted that the floor was so bad that it was necessary to repour the concrete, and that recent changes to the building code also added costs.

The exterior of the theater will be much the same as it is now. The interior, however, will be significantly altered. The tobby will have a

"The tirst year went smoothly and successfully," the mayor said, "and tha fears of some residents about the dangars of shooting wera untounded. Whito Buttato's professionalism, safaty record, accuracy, and ability to work with a community are impeccable."

Littlebrook's Arts Event To Benefit the Joe Fund

Littlebrook School will hold an "Evening of the Arts" on March 9, from 7 to 9. One of the highlights of the evening will be a silent "art auction" to raise money for the Joe Fund, established in memory of school custodian Joe Cerach, who died in 1991.

"Joe cared deeply about equal opportunity for every child," Littlebrook Principal Kathy Patten explained, "and the fund enables Littlebrook children who could not otherwise take advantage of extra-curricular activities — such as art classes, ballet, swimming or music lessons — to participate with their peers.

"Joe's dream as a child was to take art lessons, but his parents could not afford to pay for them," Ms. Patten added. "His legacy is to help children not otherwise able to realize their dreams." About 10 percent of the student body has been helped by the Joe Fund, she said.

The entire school will be turned into a gallery for the evening. The auction will include not only paintings and photography, donated by local artists — many of whom have a reputation — but also such items as handmade jewelry, several carved giraffes, woven handbags, baskets, lithographs and much more. The auction is billed as "An Assortment of Exquisite Items."

Every child in the school will exhibit work in a special art gallery. The display will include pottery, paintings, tapestries, jewelry, and other items produced in the school's art classes.

Sixth and seventh grade alumni have been invited to return for the evening; and will perform an Alumni Concert for the scholarship fund, according to Ms. Patten.

Several other musical performances have also been scheduled, including a concert by the fifth grade chorus at 7:15; a wind instrument concert by fifth grade players; and a general instrumental concert.

"Everyone is invited to the Arts Evening," Ms. Patten said. "Our entire fine arts program will be on display — and there is no charge."

was out of control, and to issue special deer management permits to municipalities.

In December, the state Division of Fish & Wildlife approved the Township's application for designation as a deer management area. The application named White Buffalo as the organization that would supply professional marksmen to thin the herd, as part of a five-year management plan.

Opponents of White Buffalo's methods held a protest march on February 17, the day the sharpshooting began; and they staged a candlelight vigil outside the Township municipal building before the Township Committee meeting on February 26.

Protesters argue that killing is an ineffective way of controlling the deer population and will ultimately result in a larger, stronger herd. They also point out that Lyme disease, for which they say deer have been made the scapegoats, is spread by ticks that also live on white mice and other animals, as well as deer.

They have urged the Committee to consider other methods of deer control, such as Stretter reflectors and immuno-contraception.

"We are willing to look at other methods," Mayor Marchand said on March 5, "but we still have 1,400 deer destroying the environment. We are not just concerned about deer-car collisions, but about the overall detrimental effect of deer on the environment."

School Board Considers the Impact Of $78.2 Million Referendum Defeat

If voters reject the $78.2 million referendum in the school election of April 17, the impact on the Princeton Regional Schools will be immediate. At the school board meeting of February 27, board members began to consider consequences.

Frank Strasburger, chair of the board's facilities committee, said he had asked Superintendent Claire Sheff Kohn to draw up a list of contingency plans, should voters reject the initiative.

Insisting that he remained optimistic about passage of the bond issue, Mr. Strasburger, nevertheless, cited a number of effects, should it fail.

Two trailers are now used as classrooms at Princeton High School. Should the referendum fail, the district will have to place more trailers at PHS, as well as at the John Witherspoon Middle School. "Possibly, we will have to use trailers at the elementary schools, as well," Mr. Strasburger said.

The number of students in each class will increase, if the referendum is rejected.

TOPICS Of the Town

High school students will no longer be permitted to take a full day of classes, eight full periods. Some programs may be eliminated, as well.

In the elementary schools, teachers of special courses like art and health will not have their own classrooms. Instead, they will have to carry their equipment from room to room on carts.

The Valley Road building, which now houses Township municipal offices, as well as the regional district administrative offices, may have to be used for school offices that would otherwise be located in other district buildings. It is assumed that the Township will vacate its offices sometime during the next year.

Half-day kindergarten classes will have to be considered, where now kindergarten meets for a full day.

Temporary Plans

"If we go that way [put all contingency plans in place], it will be only temporary," board member Howard Wainer pointed out. "We'll still have to build eventually. Could we obtain building money from the state year after year?"

[The district has submitted plans for the referendum to the state Department of Education, including detailed architectural drawings and cost estimates. Officials are anticipating state approval of the project and substantial state aid — up 20 or 25 percent, under the new Educational Facilities Construction and Funding Act.

Last July, former Governor Christine Todd Whitman signed the measure, which provides $8.6 billion for new construction and renovation statewide. It designates $6 billion for the 30 Abbott (poorer) districts, with the remaining $2.6 billion dedicated to assisting non-Abbott districts — such as Princeton.]

"It is not clear how state aid will work in the future," according to Board President Charlotte Bialek, "but the Abbott districts will receive their funds first."

Green Space

Following the discussion of contingency plans, a small group of residents who live on streets in the immediate high school neighborhood used the meeting to lobby for the preservation of green space at the high school.

"If we vote for the referendum," Moore Street resident Lisbeth Winarsky said, "we don't want to be voting for the eventual destruction of green space." Noting that parking for a total of more than 400 cars at the high school-middle school site is under consideration, she pleaded with the board to come up with a "creative solution."

"We are dealing with a property that is limited in size," noted Mr. Strasburger. "We cannot preserve it just as it is; we have no new property."

Parking is needed not only for students, board member Barbara Prince pointed out, but also for students at the Princeton Adult School, which meets two nights weekly at PHS. "Are you supporting structured parking?" she demanded of Ms. Wnarsky. "If so, can you give us an idea — within two weeks — of how much support there is for this solution?"

Green Space

"Ms. Wnarsky's request is a fair request," Walter Frank intervened. "I think we can ask Hillier [the referendum architectural firm] to pay particular attention to the preservation of green space."

Board member Joshua Leinsdorf suggested that a return to on-street parking — which residents oppose — would solve much of the problem. "We should approach the Borough and Township to permit all-day parking," he said.

Ms. Blalek noted that the site plans are still very preliminary. Once the referendum passes, she explained, Hillier will hire engineers to conduct detailed studies of parking and other matters.

"Even the building itself is adjustable," she said. "These plans really are on paper, not in stone."

"I want to see creative solutions long before we have to decide on a referendum," countered Norman Wnarsky, Ms. Wnarsky's husband. "I am deeply opposed to any plan that would create a sea of asphalt."

The discussion continued on March 1, at the facilities committee meeting, where Ms. Wnarsky and several neighbors appeared to reiterate their concerns.

"The board is committed to preserving as much green space as we can get," Mr. Strasburger said. "Because of the neighbors' eagerness to move cars off the street, we will be compelled to produce parking lots. We have got to figure out where to put all the cars." —Anne Rivera

Princeton Academy Will Add Two Grades

The Princeton Academy of the Sacred Heart, the private Roman Catholic boys school located on the former Our Lady of Princeton site, has announced plans to add two new grade levels for the 2001-2002 school year.

The school will add both a seventh grade and a Junior Kindergarten class in the fall. The Junior Kindergarten program will accommodate boys who are ready for kindergarten in most skill areas, but who miss the cut-off birth date, or boys who may have had their fifth birthday by the cut-off date, but need strengthening in some skill areas.

All students who apply for Junior Kindergarten will be screened, using standardized screening techniques. Once the student's application for admissions is received, the screening will be scheduled. A recommendation and a parent interview are also required.

For more information, or to schedule an appointment, call Tom von Oehsen at 921-6499; or e-mail him at: tvonoehsen@princetonacademy.org.

Referendum Information

Information about the PRS referendum is now available on a Referendum Hotline: 806-4321.

In addition, residents may access the PRS website: at www.prs.k12.nj.us. E-mail concerning the referendum may be sent to: facilities@ prs.k12.nj.us.

Details of the referendum will be mailed to all registered voters in the Princetons by March 9; and elementary children are expected to bring home flyers about it in their back packs this week.

WHERE DID EVERYBODY GO? A slow moving winter storm didn't stop Teodoro Estrada from shoveling snow in front of Nassau Presbyterian Church Tuesday. Other than Mr. Estrada, the sidewalks were unusually empty.

Predictions Wrong; Major Winter Storm Turns Very Minor

A major winter storm that was expected to paralyze most of New Jersey on Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday became just a typical snowstorm for most areas. Meteorologists who considered this the biggest storm in decades, some even called it a "massive snowstorm," were left red-faced and scratching their heads.

Forecasters predicted between one and two feet of accumulation for central New Jersey, but the low pressure system responsible for all of the snow turned slightly to the north on Monday afternoon, steering the heaviest precipitation away from the area.

State of Emergency

New Jersey Acting Governor Donald DiFrancesco declared a state of emergency on Sunday afternoon, in preparation for the storm. Princeton Township police declared a snow emergency at 3 p.m., prohibiting residents from parking vehicles on municipally owned streets.

Rain, sleet and freezing rain pelted the area Sunday night and Monday. Some snow fell, with little accumulation. More snow fell overnight Monday and all day Tuesday, but accumulations measured approximately 3-4 inches in most spots. Still, officials weren't taking any chances.

Montgomery Township schools were closed on Monday. It is the third consecutive three day weekend for students there. Princeton Regional schools were also closed. Both schools operated on a 90 minute delay Tuesday.

Banks around the area, such as PNC Bank on Nassau Street, and Third Federal Savings, Princeton Shopping Center opened at their normal time on Monday and Tuesday.

Princeton residents may have gotten their mail a little later on Monday, but carriers were delivering. According to Postal supervisor Steve Ritter, the carriers got a late start, but the line of travel was like any other day. He said it was just a normal day.

Businesses Closed

Most businesses along Nassau Street were closed on Monday. There were some, like Edward Jo of Image Photo, who braved the elements.

"Business is slow," he said. "I guess it's good because people stay off the streets."

Is he tired of the snow?

"I'm tired of hearing about it," he said jokingly.

Talbots was also still open early Monday afternoon. The weather prompted one employee to say, "The snow is bad enough, but we also have to pay for parking here."

Grocery stores were packed with last minute shoppers over the weekend, but were deserted on Monday. An employee of Shop Rite in Montgomery Township said the store was inundated with people on Saturday and Sunday, and that it was "out of control." The following day was "very quiet."

"We got bombed Saturday and Sunday," said Vince Pagano, Manager of McCaffrey's inside the Princeton Shopping Center. "It was like a morgue in here Monday. It was very active (Tuesday), everything was reloaded, fresh, and we're back in business.

"We did a lot of business," he continued. "Our job is to provide the product. We scheduled early deliveries, and accommodated the customers. We didn't run out of anything.

"There was bread and milk on the counters when I left Sunday afternoon. The customers came in and found what they wanted. We had a very good weekend."

A Lull at Larini's

Things were quiet during the past two days for tow truck drivers at Larini's Service Center, Alexander Road, as opposed to the last snow storm that blanketed the area on February 22.

"It's been very slow," said Ben Bleacher, an employee at the garage. "Everybody has planted themselves in one area."

Drivers from the garage responded to nearly 50 roadside calls during the February 22 storm, and were running on a two hour delay.

So what about those with business plans in the area?

Debbie Rodriguez, director of sales at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in the Carnegie Center, said there were a lot of cancellations there as a result of the forecast. Those flying in for business conferences were forced to change plans. Ms. Rodriguez said a large group checked into the hotel on Sunday, and was still there on Monday. She said that helped business.

According to Teri McIntire of the Nassau Inn, there were an increased number of phone calls Monday from people inquiring about occupancy.

This storm's bark turned out to be worse than its bite. Yes, it's better to be prepared, just in case. This time, it was the threat of the storm that paralyzed the state, not the storm itself. Punxsutawney Phil, the groundhog, wasn't kidding when he predicted six more weeks of winter on February 2.

PRS Building Plan Receives $500K From University

Princeton University has pledged $500,000 towards the Princeton Regional Schools' $78.2 million building referendum, scheduled to be on the school election ballot on April 17.

The University's gift will be used to help convert the high school auditorium into the main reading room of an expanded and modernized high school library.

In February, the board of education unanimously approved plans for the referendum, which will provide for renovations and additions to the four elementary schools, John Witherspoon Middle School, and Princeton High School.

The state Department of Education must approve the project — and must specify the amount of funding the state will contribute — in order for the referendum question to appear on the April ballot.

David Hingston of The Hillier Group architectural firm has suggested that PRS can expect New Jersey to contribute between 20 percent and 25 percent of the total referendum cost.

In a letter to the school board, Princeton University President Harold Shapiro noted that the PRS proposed capital program, "presents a once-in-a-generation opportunity for the Princeton Regional School district to make improvements and additions to its facilities.

"These improvements are urgently needed," President Shapiro continued, "if the schools are to continue to provide educational experiences of the highest possible quality."

"They [the University] really were exceedingly generous," commented School Board Vice President Frank Strasburger, who heads the board's facilities committee. "Princeton University has always been a wonderful neighbor to our public schools," he said. "This gift continues that tradition."

Ongoing Support

"This extraordinary contribution on the part of Princeton University demonstrates the University's ongoing support of the Princeton Regional Schools and the education of its children. It is a major gift to be added to a long list of other significant contributions made to this district by the University," commented Princeton Regional Schools Superintendent Claire Sheil Kohn.

The University's gift, Mr. Strasburger pointed out, amounts to a "vote of confidence" for the Princeton Regional district. "We hope their action will stimulate the private sector to contribute," he added.

The University assists the school district in a number of ways, Mr. Strasburger added. For example, as a tax-exempt institution, the University is entitled to remove its faculty and student housing from the local property tax rolls. The fact that it chooses not to, results in a revenue of more than $5 million to the Borough and Township.

"The truth is, the University's decision to remain on the tax rolls results in a much better benefit than if it gave gifts in kind to the school district," Mr. Strasburger stated. "Every year, [the University] pays a school tax, because its housing increases the school population."

Another way in which the University helps the school district is by providing it with a "technology gateway," Mr. Strasburger said, enabling the schools to connect through the University to the Internet.

"Our whole district network is part of the Princeton University web," Mr. Strasburger explained. "They set it up; we connect through them and save about $180,000 annually."

Two independent demographic analyses have projected district growth at about 20 percent for the next 10 years, School Board President Charlotte Bialek pointed out. In the past 10 years, she added, school enrollment has grown 34 percent.

"I am proud of the extensive and careful planning that has gone into the proposals by so many in the community, as well as the district," the board president said.

Redding Circle Fire Sends Teen to PMC

A grease fire Thursday night at a Redding Circle apartment sent one teenager to the hospital, according to Princeton Township Police.

Police said the fire was reported at 10:42 p.m. A pot of grease that caught fire ignited the cabinets above it. The fire was extinguished by a resident, but the cabinets were still smoldering.

There was extensive smoke damage in the apartment, prompting Township Fire Official Ted Cashel to label it as "uninhabitable." A 15-year-old male resident there was taken to the Princeton Medical Center, where he was treated for smoke inhalation.

A 12-year-old female and her mother were in the apartment, but were not injured.

Tamora Pierce

Writer Tamora Pierce To Speak at Library

Tamora Pierce, the author of more than 15 fantasy books for children and young adults, will read from and discuss her works at 7:30, March 12, at the Princeton Public Library, 65 Witherspoon Street.

Ms. Pierce is the first author-in-residence, Princeton High School and the Princeton Public Library. Her books, including the quartets The Song of the Lioness, The Circle of Magic, and The Immortals are very popular with young readers.

Ms. Pierce's fantasy works are noted for their strong female characters, which have given her a large following among adolescent and teenage girls.

A native of western Pennsylvania, Ms. Pierce is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania. She has worked in a number of disparate jobs. She was, for example, a tax clerk in upstate New York; a social worker at a home for girls in Idaho; and a secretary at a Manhattan investment bank — while she wrote the Song of the Lioness series. The books were published between 1983 and 1988.

In addition to her program at the library, Ms. Pierce will present writing workshops to ninth-grade classes at Princeton High School on March 12 and 13.

For more information, call 924-9529. For more information on library programs and services, visit www.princetonlibrary.org.

The natural evolution of Miele vacuum cleaners. Power, filtration and convenience are the trademarks of Miele vacuum cleaners. Since 1927, Miele has been manufacturing vacuum cleaners to clean your home and filter the air you breathe.

The Miele Plus package is the culmination of years of design technology and comes packed as an economical solution for your cleaning needs.

1100 Watts of power
By combining a powerful 1100 Watt motor with a smooth sealed system, Miele vacuum cleaners achieve an incredible airflow of 118 cubic feet per minute. Airflow is the key to our superior cleaning ability and makes removing dirt and debris from your carpeting and furniture easier. The Miele Plus' radial speed control lets you adjust the motor for optimal cleaning performance on any surface or flooring type.

Clean Air
The Miele Plus comes equipped with a double-layer dustbag, a pre-motor filter and an advanced electro static filter called the Super Air Clean Filter. This filter is designed to remove most microscopic particles from the exhaust air of the machine, reducing allergen, and dust levels throughout your house.

When combined with a sealed system design, the Miele Plus offers a level of filtration of fine particles superior to some HEPA filter vacuum cleaners.

The sealed system that helps improve filtration also helps improve suction. By having tight joints and rubber seats, Miele vacuum cleaners keep the dirt and dust where it should be - in the machine.

Integrated tools
An upholstery tool and crevice nozzle store in a caddy on the machine, allowing for quick access when cleaning furniture and tight corners. A dusting brush is also included for cleaning tabletops and bookcases.

Electric powerbrush
Designed to effectively clean a variety of carpeting types, this tool can also be used for light cleaning of smooth surfaces. A soft bristle design gently deep cleans carpeting and helps remove surface lint from carpeting.

Drug Benefits

Poor elderly patients will be able to retain their prescription drug benefits from the state even though the rest of their medical care may come from HMOs under a bill approved last week by a NJ Assembly committee.

Under the bill, the state would proceed with plans to shift elderly or disabled Medicaid recipients to managed care health insurance plans, but would allow them to use a fee-for-service program for the prescription drugs.

"These people have severe problems to begin with," commented Assemblywoman Charlotte Vandervalk (R.-Montvale), a chief sponsor of the legislation. "If they can't use a local pharmacy, it's an added burden."

Preventing Tattoos

Those younger than 18 would need parental consent to get a tattoo or have any part of the body pierced, under a bill approved last week by a state Assembly committee.

The bill, cleared by the Consumer Affairs and Regulated Professions Committee, would make it a crime for tattoo and body-piercing businesses to serve underage customers, who did not produce written consent from their parents.

Under the bill, owners of tattoo and body-piercing shops would be fined up to $1,000 and would face up to six months in jail for doing business with underage customers.

West Nile Virus

A plan to spend $10 million to study the West Nile virus and ways to control it cleared an Assembly committee last week. The bill would require the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) and the Department of Health and Senior Services to create statewide plans to handle diseases like West Nile.

"In a state pervaded by watersheds and forest lands — both excellent breeding grounds for mosquitoes — time is of the essence. To avoid further tragedy, it is critical to quickly discover just how we can all better protect ourselves," said bill sponsor Assemblyman Gerald Zecker (R.-Clifton).

Builders' Lawsuit

The NJ Builders Association has filed a lawsuit against the state to block the final environmental rule issued by former Governor Christine Whitman, which was intended to stem sprawl.

The regulation subjects proposed housing developments, with a minimum of six homes using septic systems, to the same kind of environmental review imposed on sewer expansions. Under current regulations, developers can build up to 49 homes with septic systems, without a review from the DEP.

Opponents say the measure was illegally adopted and limits housing opportunities for all but the very wealthy.

The builders argue, as well, that the DEP failed to explain exactly what the new rules would be. Criteria will be issued soon to give state officials and developers guidance in how the new septic system rules will be implemented, according to the DEP.

The regulations are scheduled to take effect March 20.

Good Fences, Safe Turtles

Fences erected along two tributaries of the Hackensack River have successfully kept diamondback turtles away from speeding cars on portions of the NJ Turnpike through the Meadowlands.

For years, female turtles were killed, trying to cross six lanes of traffic in search of places to lay eggs. Three years ago, however, the Turnpike Authority installed 560 feet of wooden snow fencing along the Saw Mill and Kingsland creeks, to keep the turtles from crossing.

Officials and environmentalists announced last week that the project has been a success.

tin ceiling and a ceramic tile and carpeted floor. There will be wood wainscotting all around, with wall covering above the wainscotting.

Inside, the walls will be wainscoted and topped with acoustic wall panel. The ceiling will be black and the seats brown. The center wall separating the two theaters will be acoustically treated. (No more hearing bombs explode in the action movie next door while watching a love story in which the loudest sound is a kiss.)

"All the distribution companies are getting very excited as we get closer to the opening day," said Louise Stephens of Manhattan-based Theater Management Corporation, operator of The Garden.

She will continue the same booking philosophy as before, with a mixture of art movies and higher-end commercial films. An example of the latter, she said, is Castoway. If she were booking now, said Ms. Stephens, she might be looking at Crouching Tiger, Hidden Drogon, and Before Night Falls as art film possibilities.

She also said she was thrilled that the University has agreed to purchase a high level of sound and projection equipment, "the best the money can buy for a theater this size."

The Garden's renovation will also include a new roof; new heating, ventilating and air conditioning systems; a new fire alarm and sprinkler system; and new millwork and cabinetry.

Built in the early 1920's to accommodate Princeton University's Triangle Club, The Garden took on a new identity as a movie theater when Triangle moved to McCarter Theatre in the late 20's. It changed hands several times in the next few decades until United Artists, saying it would cost too much to repair violations, pulled up stakes and closed it in November 1992.

Shut down for a year, The Garden reopened under a lease agreement with Theater Management Corporation, which has operated it ever since.

Islamic Vision Topic Of Talk of Trinity

Trinity Church will welcome guest speaker Professor Akbar Ahmed Sunday, March 11, when he addresses the islamic vision and its commonality with other world religions. The hour-long presentation and discussion will begin at 10:15 a.m.

Currently a visiting professor of anthropology and the Stewart Fellow in the Humanities at Princeton University, Prof. Ahmed has also been visiting professor at Harvard University, Cambridge University, and the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton. He held the Iqbal Fellowship (The Iqbal Chair in Pakistan Studies) at Cambridge University for five years.

Prof. Ahmed has held senior positions in Pakistan and has been the Pakistan high commissioner (ambassador) to the UK. He was commissioner in Baluchistan and the founder director-general of the National Center for Rural Development in Islamabad.

The Royal Anthropological Institute arranged for Prof. Ahmed to lecture to Princess Diana on Islam. He advised Prince Charles on Islam and Islamic matters. He was Commissioner on the Runnymede Trust in London to study the causes of anti-Semitism. He was also Commissioner on the historic Runnymede Commission on "Islamophobia" or the hatred against Muslims (a word coined by the Commission).

He is the author of many books on contemporary Islam, which have been translated into many languages. His book Discovering Islam: Making Sense of Muslim History and Society was the basis of the six-part BBC TV series Living Islam, presented by Professor Ahmed.

The public is invited to attend this discussion, which is part of Trinity Church's regular Sunday Adult Education series.

Public Library Launches 24-Hour netLibrary

The Princeton Public Library has become one of only seven libraries in the region — and the only one in Mercer County — to offer netLibrary, a 24-hour-a-day library service on its World Wide Web site: www.princetonlibrary.org.

Through links in the on-line catalog at the library or at remote locations via the World Wide Web, patrons may choose from more than 900 e-books that can be electronically "checked out" for 24 hours.

The books appear on computer screens resembling pages in an actual book; and borrowers can conduct full-text searches to find the materials they need. Each book may be used by only one patron at a time.

The system provides an automatic return of the borrowed materials. When the 24-hour borrowing period is over, the e-book is removed from the user's computer and returned via the Internet. The initial collection of 942 e-books has titles related to reference, business, computers, travel, careers, and tests.

"You're not going to be able to read War and Peace online," says Leslie Burger, the library's executive director, "but if you're having trouble with a computer program, for instance, you'll be able to go online and instantly check out a title like The Complete Idiot's Guide to Microsoft Works Suite, then perform a full-text search to find the answer you need."

The Princeton Library is participating in a netLibrary trial, sponsored by the Central New Jersey Library Cooperative, which has established a users' group to set policies and share experience and tips.

"This is a perfect pilot project since e-books are an untested market for libraries, and we can learn from each other," said Connie Paul, director of the Central New Jersey Library Cooperative. "E-books are in a shaking-out phase," she continued. "In some form, they are here to stay. This project will test whether this form is useful to patrons of our libraries."

For more information on library programs and services, call 924-9529, or visit: www.princetonlibrary.org.

Researchers to Discuss Findings on Gutenberg

Paul Needham and Blaise Agüera y Arcas will present their recent research on early European printing at 5 on Thursday, March 15 in McCormick 101, on the University campus.

In their lecture, "How Were the Earliest European Printing Types Made?" Mr. Needham, librarian at the Scheide Library (a private collection in the Firestone Library), and Mr. Agüera y Arcas, a librarian research associate, will discuss their finding that Johann Gutenberg did not invent moveable type, and will speak about the implications of their work.

Mr. Agüera y Arcas devised a method to analyze printed texts with a computer, which the researchers used to examine several of Gutenberg's documents. Through inconsistencies in the individual letters, the pair concluded that — contrary to popular belief — Gutenberg did not use moveable type.

The talk is sponsored by the Friends of the Princeton University Library, and is free and open to the public. A reception in the Main Exhibition Gallery at Firestone Library will follow.

Community Park Will Lose Principal In September

Community Park School Principal Toby Kline has announced that she will retire from her position, effective November 1. She and her husband plan to move to Florida in the fall, to be with the rest of her family.

Ms. Kline has been at the school since September 1998. She started as an interim principal, replacing Sheila Cole, and was appointed principal a few months later.

She did her practice teaching at Riverside School, then went on to a 30-year educational career in East Windsor.

After only a few weeks back in the PRS district, she said, she felt "at home." During her tenure at the school, Ms. Kline observed, she has tried to "create CP as the heart of the community, and a family-centered school. I'll always remember the beautiful days spent here."

At the school board meeting of February 27, PRS Superintendent Claire Sheff Kohn said she hopes to have a replacement for Ms. Kline by September, when the 2001-2002 school year begins.

While she will regret not being in Princeton during the excitement of referendum construction, Ms. Kline said, "This school district is so strong under Claire's leadership, and there is such a positive feeling, I'm not nervous about leaving. There has never been a better time for Princeton."

Interview Committee

Dr. Kohn will convene an interview committee, she indicated, to be headed by PRS director of human resources Lewis Goldstein. Two board members will serve, as will assistant superintendent Jeff Graber; one elementary school principal; representatives of the teachers' and administrators' unions; the two PTO co-presidents, or their designees; two to three Community Park teachers; and one member of the school's support staff.

The committee will establish criteria and will advertise the principal's position. Specific individuals may be recruited from outside the district, as well.

"Obviously, anyone inside the district who has the proper credentials and certification is welcome to apply," Dr. Kohn said, "but we want to do as wide a search as possible for the best possible person."

6 to 8 Candidates

The committee will interview six to eight candidates and will recommend up to three finalists to Dr. Kohn. The superintendent said she is confident a replacement for Ms. Kline can be located before the end of the present school year.

The plan is for Ms. Kline's replacement to work in tandem with her for at least two weeks before the school year officially begins in September, the principal explained.

Board member Anne Burns, who has two sons at Community Park, praised Ms. Kline for bringing stability and leadership to the school. "She has done a fabulous job," Ms. Burns said, "and the district is better for it." Others, including Dr. Kohn, echoed her words.

Also retiring at the end of the current academic year will be Jacqueline Wadsworth, who has served as the nurse at Princeton High School for 37 years; Katherine Miller, an ESL (English as a Second Language) teacher at Littlebrook School for 17 years; and Janet Brittain, a chemistry teacher at the high school for 19 years.

Derek Bok to Speak At Princeton University

Derek Bok, chairman of Common Cause and president emeritus of Harvard University will lecture on "Setting New Jersey's Campaign Reform Agenda in 2001," Thursday, March 8, at 4:30, in Dodds Auditorium, Robertson Hall.

Dr. Bok is chairman of Common Cause, a nonprofit, nonpartisan organization that aims to ensure open, accountable government. He has written about campaign reform, arguing that soft money is a main cause of the cynicism "eating away at the vitality of our democracy and the willingness of citizens to participate in it."

Dr. Bok, the 300th Anniversary University Professor at Harvard University, has been a lawyer, dean of the Law School, and president of Harvard University.

This lecture is sponsored by the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs and Common Cause of New Jersey. It is free and open to the public.

PHS Social Studies Dept. Receives NEH Grant

The Princeton High School Social Studies Department announced recently that it will receive a grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH), for a project to teach students about women's efforts during the past 20 years.

Scholar-in-Residence Bonnie Smith, an expert on women's contributions, will facilitate the program.

The grant, sponsored by the Dodge Foundation Humanities Scholar-in-Residence Program, is designed to emphasize the importance of women in society.

The PHS project will deal particularly with women who participated in the events following the United Nation's Fourth World Conference on Women, held in Beijing, China, in September 1995. The people and organizations supporting the grant feel these women — who changed the world — should be recognized.

Dr. Smith was invited to collaborate with teachers at PHS to develop the course. She will work with Patrick Fagerson, John Baxter, Bob Vivens, and Barbara O'Breza, to select an appropriate curriculum.

Rummage Sale at Trinity Scheduled March 17,18

This year's Trinity Church rummage sale, scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, March 17 and 18, offers several features. First, in honor of St. Patrick's Day, anyone dressed as a fully costumed leprechaun will be allowed in at 9:05 on Saturday.

"To get in at 9:05 a.m., we expect a pretty complete leprechaun outfit," said event chairman Reg Bishop. A green plastic hat will not suffice.

Tickets for the sale will be given out at 8 a.m. Saturday. Free hot cocoa will be served to those in line at 8:30. Signage will be in Spanish, Polish and English.

Also there will be a shopping preview sale for better dresses only on Friday, March 16 from 7 to 9 p.m. Tickets to the preview sale are $5 and will be available at the door. Items include dresses, shoes, accessories, evening wear, and maternity. Only 50 people can be accommodated Friday night.

Two items will be auctioned at the conclusion of the sale on Sunday afternoon. They are a 1991 Volvo 944 GLE, four-door grey sedan fully loaded, with black leather interior; and a riding lawn mower.

Hours are March 17 from 9 to 3 and March 18 from 12:30 to 3. Most items will be discounted by 50 percent on Sunday. At 2 on Sunday, in Pierce Hall, clothing will be sold for $3 a bag. Trinity Church is located at 33 Mercer Street. For more information, call 924-2277. A rummage update is available at www.trinityprinceton.org.

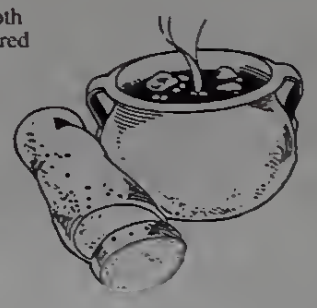
Eleanor's Hamburger Stew

Originally meant to make "ends meet" this dish has become a family favorite. The cooking time is short and this one pot meal "dresses up" nicely with bread, wine and salad.

P.S. Children Love It!



- 1 48 oz. can chicken broth
- 1 medium onion, quartered
- 4 bay leaves
- 4 tbsp. thyme or herbes de Provence
- 1 lb. hamburger, made into small meatballs
- 3-4 potatoes
- 3 carrots, chopped
- 1 cup celery, chopped
- 1 small bag of frozen mixed vegetables
- ½-1 cup cooking wine
- Salt & pepper

The beauty of this stew is that it's virtually a one pot meal. I usually add the potatoes, carrots, and meatballs first to get them cooked, along with the onions, celery and spices. Bring to a boil, then reduce to a good simmer (about 20 minutes). Add the frozen vegetables, wine, and salt and pepper. Cook another 10-15 minutes and serve.

Internet Law Expert To Talk at Institute

Lawrence Lessig, professor of law at Stanford University and authority on Internet law and constitutional law, will speak on "The Architecture of Innovation" on March 14 at 4:30 in Wolfensohn Hall on the campus of the Institute for Advanced Study. A reception will follow.

"The Internet has been a source of extraordinary innovation, both in the arts and in commerce," observes Prof. Lessig. "This innovation hangs upon the network's architecture, or alternatively, upon its code. This architecture sets the net's policy, and continued innovation and creativity depend upon maintaining the same policy."

In his talk, Prof. Lessig "will connect values that the Internet has evinced to this architecture, or code, and then demonstrate how these values are being threatened, as the architecture is changed. There is a politics in code, and our blindness to this politics will mean the loss of values protected by this code."

Prof. Lessig, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania with an M.A. from Trinity College, Cambridge, earned his J.D. in 1989 from Yale Law School.

NEIGHBORHOOD MEETINGS:

REPORT OF MEETINGS ON:
November 18, 2000 • January 6 and 27, 2001 • February 17, 2001

"Princeton Future" is described as "A group of citizens interested in the long term development of the Princeton community." The statement goes on to spell out several constructive roles that "Princeton Future" can play primarily through the involvement of individual citizens. This is an interim report resulting from a series of four citizen's meetings in the area we call "John-Witherspoon". This is the geographic area bounded by Paul Robeson Place, John Street, Witherspoon Street and Birch Avenue. It is significant to note that the area encompasses streets in both Princeton Borough and Princeton Township. Well over one hundred of our neighbors and friends (some outside of the geographic area) met and addressed the following questions posed by "Princeton Future".

- What people liked most about their community
- What people would like to see changed about their community
- What would you like to see in the future

It is significant to note that during the discussions, "community" was addressed in the context of the above-defined John-Witherspoon area.

At the outset of each of our four meetings the participants frequently moved back in history as the basis for discussions on the present and hopes for the future. The past, to most of the participants, reflected a history of fear, anger and betrayal. The anger stems from the concept of "Urban Renewal" as initiated by Edgar Palmer when he "envisioned" and designed Palmer Square. This development is cynically described as "Urban Removal" since it resulted in the displacement of Negro families who lived on Baker Street, now know as Palmer Square. Their homes were separated into two units and placed on Birch Avenue, thus giving rise to the term "Urban Removal". History also reminded the meeting participants of the eradication of Jackson Street, another threat of Urban Renewal in the 1950's and the ongoing siege of zoning and health codes that goes on unabated by the developers, landlords and even municipal officials. It is easily understandable that discussions on "Princeton Future" were clouded by Princeton Past and Princeton Present. Certainly to the participants, the past is truly prologue and that they too may fall victim to Princeton's future.

Even in the midst of these feelings of misgivings, the meetings did provoke responses to the questions posed by the future of Princeton. We have attached codified reports (in the words of the participants) on the questions raised for discussions.

For many outside of the neighborhood the oppressive history of condemnation and acquisition, of municipal neglect and disparate treatment is a history that should be told and understood by all who are truly interested in a positive "Princeton Future" for all of its citizens.

We want to share with the entire Princeton community this interim report to "Princeton Future" from the John-Witherspoon Neighborhood Task Force. It is the result of intensive meetings over the past four months. It is a model for community participation in the planning of Princeton's downtown core and neighborhoods.

Transitional Housing for Leigh Avenue

Borough Council has agreed to lend its support to a plan that would provide transitional housing in at least one Borough-owned row house on Leigh Avenue.

Trinity Episcopal Church heads a consortium of houses of worship and community groups seeking to provide housing for families living in unacceptable conditions or homeless. It hopes to lease from the Borough one or possibly two now-vacant three-bedroom units for this purpose.

The five row houses at 100-104 Leigh Avenue were acquired by the Borough in 1997 through foreclosure. They were intended to be renovated and turned into affordable housing. But little work on the units has been done, and the Borough has been cited by the State for deficiencies that must be corrected very soon.

Under Trinity's plan, transitional housing for up to one year would be offered to families that meet several criteria. Among these are a connection to Princeton; a need to move from being either homeless or underhoused into permanent housing; an ability to meet Princeton Housing Authority guidelines; and a commitment and reasonable likelihood of moving into permanent housing within a year.

The Princeton Interfaith Housing Task Force, spearheaded by Trinity Church, plans to provide supportive social services along with the transitional affordable rental housing.

Councilman Ryan Stark Lilienthal said the Borough should be supportive of the plan. Councilman David Goldfarb agreed, endorsing the Borough's participation.

One of the participating organizations in the Interfaith Housing Task Force is Homefront, which serves the homeless in Mercer County. The organization has 22 units of transitional housing in Mercer County. Social services would be coordinated by the task force, Homefront, and local agencies.

A number of John Witherspoon residents were at the meeting, and several suggested that their neighborhood not be the only one targeted for transitional housing. Witherspoon Street resident Eric Craig asked whether Trinity owned homes in other sections of town that might be used for such housing.

"It's always in John Witherspoon," said another resident. Except for units on Hamilton Avenue, all affordable housing built by the Borough is in the John Witherspoon neighborhood. This includes units on John Street as well as the housing currently under construction on Maclean Street and Shirley Court.

Should Be in All Neighborhoods

Peggy Prescott, representing Trinity Church, said the task force was trying to line up affordable rentals in other parts of the community.

"A lot of people are concerned with keeping apartments in tip top condition," said Ms. Prescott. "The Borough will fix up the outside and we will do the inside. The buildings will be more of a credit to the neighborhood."

Mayor Marvin Reed said that affordable housing should be in all neighborhoods as well as in nearby communities, not just in the Borough.

In a memo to the Borough, the task force states that it will renovate 102½ Leigh Avenue to a habitable condition, completing all repairs required by the Borough and State. The Borough would then lease the house to the Interfaith coalition for a period of two years. Tenants would be chosen by the coalition, in collaboration with Homefront and local agencies.

Members of the Interfaith Housing Task Force include Trinity Church, Princeton United Methodist Church, Unitarian Universalist Congregation of Princeton, Princeton Jewish Center, St. Paul's Catholic Church, Nassau Presbyterian Church, Gospel Ministries, YWCA of Princeton, Crisis Ministry of Princeton and Trenton, Princeton Housing Authority, Homefront, Not In Our Town, Nassau Christian Center, MECHA, Princeton Community Housing, Princeton Social Services Office, Latin American Task Force, Christ Congregation, First Church of Christ Scientist, Princeton University Chapel, Witherspoon Street Presbyterian Church, and New Jersey Indian Church.

As a condition of its support, Council asked that the coalition set up a neighborhood meeting to review the plans for the project.

Teens Arrested For Trespassing at Princeton High

Borough police responded to Princeton High School on February 28 after receiving a report of a trespasser being detained there. Upon their arrival, they took a 17-year-old juvenile into custody for trespassing. He had been previously warned not to be on the campus. He was charged with juvenile delinquency and released to his father.

Police responded to the high school again on March 2 after receiving another trespassing report. This time they took a 16-year-old Borough resident into custody. He had been suspended from school and was not allowed on campus. He was charged with juvenile delinquency and taken to the Mercer County Youth Detention Facility because he violated the conditions of his probation.

Borough patrol officer James Martinez stopped an Eisenhower Street resident, 30-year-old Diegio Vonvacano, for speeding on Nassau Street Saturday. Subsequent to the stop, Vonvacano was arrested for driving while intoxicated. He was charged with the same, and released on his own recognizance.

Police arrested a 19-year-old man Saturday for attempting to purchase alcoholic beverages at Varsity Liquors, Nassau Street, while under the legal age. Subsequent to his arrest, police searched him and found that he had marijuana in his possession. He was charged with being a minor attempting to purchase alcohol, and was also charged with possession of a controlled dangerous substance (marijuana under 50g.)

Missing Cash Bag

Someone entered the office of Teresa's Restaurant, Palmer Square East, between 1:45 and 8:45 a.m. March 3, and stole a deposit bag containing cash from a desk drawer. There were no signs of forced entry to the building or office.

The items were left unattended on the Nassau Street sidewalk.

Police reported a theft that occurred between 7 a.m. and 8 p.m. February 25. Someone stole a 23-year-old Trenton woman's coat from a closet at the Quarry Street Nursing Home.

A 67-year-old Hamilton Avenue resident was the victim of a burglary and theft that occurred between 1 and 4 p.m. February 27. Someone entered his home and stole $32 cash.

A 57-year-old Princeton University employee was the victim of a burglary and theft that occurred between 8 a.m. and 12:45 p.m. March 1. Someone entered her office and stole a gray Coach pocketbook ($200), a blue Coach wallet ($50), a black Palm Pilot VX ($400), a Nokia cellular telephone ($100), various forms of identification, and credit cards. All of the items were left on the floor under her desk.

The New Jersey State Bar Foundation has published a booklet entitled Law Points for Senior Citizens, designed to provide seniors with information on issues of concern to them.

Fourteen sections are included — on topics like age discrimination, social security retirement benefits, supplemental security income, grandparents' rights, wills, advance health care directives, and elder abuse. The publication concludes with a section listing the offices of aging for New Jersey's 21 counties.

Free copies of Law Points are available through the Bar Foundation in single copies, and in bulk for law offices, community and senior citizen groups.

Copies may be ordered directly from the Foundation's website, at www.njsbf.org., or at 1-800-FREE-LAW.

Cancer Care to Honor B. Yedlin at Benefit

Cancer Care of New Jersey will honor Herrontown Road resident Benedict Yedlin at its annual fundraiser, "An Evening of Acrobatics," a benefit evening to be held on Monday, March 12, at McCarter Theatre. The evening will feature a pre-performance reception, underwritten by the Princeton Marriott, followed by a performance of The Peking Acrobats.

In 1994, Mr. Yedlin began working to help Cancer Care establish a presence in the Princeton area. He invited community leaders, business associates, and friends to join him in forming Cancer Care's Greater Princeton Advisory Board.

Mr. Yedlin and his son Charlie later donated space in their office building on Herrontown Road to Cancer Care social workers, so they could provide services to residents of Mercer County. Cancer Care has grown and flourished in Mercer County, largely because of Mr. Yedlin's support, friendship, and dedication.

The agency now serves over 500 people with cancer and their families annually, from their offices in Princeton and Trenton.

Tickets for the benefit are $125. Proceeds from the event will ensure the continuity of Cancer Care services to the Mercer County community. Janssen Pharmaceutica is the title sponsor for the event.

For more information, contact Cancer Care, at 924-8752.

The Princeton Rug Society will meet on Saturday, March 10, at 2:30, in the meeting room of the Lawrence Public Library, Route 1 & Darrah Lane. There is ample parking.

Marc Weksler will present an illustrated lecture on Coptic textiles, of which he is a noted collector. Members are invited to bring their own examples of Coptic pieces. The public is invited.

Amateur astronomer Jack Gelfand, a psychology professor at the University, will discuss his 16-inch Dobsonian telescope, on March 13, at 8, in the monthly public lecture series sponsored by the Amateur Astronomers Association of Princeton.

Professor Gelfand will describe his creation in a presentation, entitled "The Flying Dobsonian — Voyages to the Heart of Darkness." The complete telescope fits into one airplane suitcase and a carry-on box for the mirror.

The public is invited to attend the lecture, which will take place in Peyton Hall, where the Department of Astrophysical Sciences is located. For more information, call Program Chairman Mark Lopez, at 393-2565.

The Princeton Singles, a non-profit group, for ages 55-plus, will sponsor a hike on flat terrain, on Saturday, March 10, starting at 10. Hikers will meet at the Wine Press, 4484 Route 27, Kingston. The only cost will be the price of the meal.

For reservations or additional information, call 896-1170.

The Central Jersey Genealogical Club will meet on Tuesday, March 13, at 7, in the lower-level meeting room of the Hamilton Township Library, 1 Municipal Drive, Hamilton Township.

Following the business meeting, Virginia Banerjee will speak about "Finding Your Folks Using Maps, Land, and Tax Records." A rich source of information, these resources are not widely used.

Visitors are welcome. Membership is open to all those interested in genealogy — experienced or beginner. For more information, visit www.rootsweb.com/~njcjgc- or contact the club by mail, at P.O. Box 9903, Hamilton 08650-1903.

Imposing New Sidewalks on Hodge Rd. Is a Travesty Residents Find Incredible

To the Editor of Town Topics:

The following is a letter to Carl E. Peters, Borough Engineer.

RE: Sidewalk Relocation on Hodge Road. I have been dividing my time between our home here in Princeton and our home in Lake Forest, Illinois, thus I've been somewhat disconnected. I did, however, attend the final meeting where the Borough Council passed the proposed redesign of Hodge Road. I attended for the sole purpose of listening to discussion on the proposed sidewalk relocation agenda, which I'd heard about a day or so earlier, but learned, after-the-fact, that it was buried in the redesign proposal, which had just been approved. It was only in speaking with you that this was made clear to me.

I was never notified of meetings of the Shade Tree Commission when they discussed moving our sidewalks two feet closer to our homes. I learned this from a neighbor who learned it from you.

I'm not a lawyer, but aren't we as citizens of Princeton supposed to be notified when something this imposing on our residences is being discussed? Can't we, the residents affected by this sidewalk relocation, be heard? Our front yards are going to be dramatically changed and not for the better. Among us we have mature landscaping, in-ground lighting, and Belgium Block, which will be in jeopardy, if not destroyed, leaving us with half the Borough bill plus the expense of re-landscaping our front yards. I find this incredible.

In the fall I spoke with Mayor Marvin Reed about the slovenly condition of our sidewalks along Nassau and Witherspoon Streets. I find them an embarrassment — they're littered with cigarette butts, paper cups, and just about anything else that can be tossed aside — this is not the face Princeton should show to visitors or residents. He said he'd look into it, stating there was little he could do, that it was the responsibility of the merchants to clean the area in front of their businesses, and thus the streets remain unchanged. The cigarette butts, paper cups and just about anything else is still there.

I mention this because I find it confusing that sidewalks' can be moved, landscaping damaged, and bills for one-half the Borough charges sent to the residents affected by your proposed sidewalk relocation, but imposing responsibility for maintaining sidewalk cleanliness downtown cannot be achieved, to quote Yul Brynner in The King and I, "T'is a puzzlement."

Princeton is my home of choice, and I feel privileged to live here. Please do not relocate the sidewalk two feet into our yards; leave it where it is. It is my intention to inform the residents of Princeton of this travesty — their yards may be next.

Helicopter Surveillance to Catch Criminals Who Feed Deer Shows Good Judgement

To the Editor of Town Topics:

I have followed the deer problem controversy for years and have driven defensively to avoid colliding with deer on local roads for even longer. I gave up walking barefoot, going sockless, and wearing shorts or sandals in my yard, public parks and open space to protect myself from deer-borne ticks. I built ugly fences to protect my plantings and kept my eyes focused on the ground to avoid stepping in deer droppings. I denied my grandchild outdoor pleasures that my children freely enjoyed. And the explosion of the deer population continued.

For public safety and health hazard reasons, I commend Township Committee for selecting the most reasonable option for reducing the size of the deer herd to a level appropriate to the area. Our elected representatives thoroughly considered the problem and explored alternative solutions. They listened to those opposed to action and to those favoring alternate approaches. After years of investigating and discussing they fulfilled their governmental responsibility and acted.

The Township showed great wisdom by beginning herd reduction (shooting) without inviting the press to take pictures and opponents to cause disruption. The use of helicopters by the Police Department to catch criminals who violate the no feeding law shows good judgment in adopting surveillance techniques to fit the illegal act.

It is distressing that members of Township Committee are vilified for biting the bullet and making a decision that antagonizes a minority in our community and non-residents who honestly and sincerely object to the program. Our elected representatives are honest, sincere and responsive to the entire community. There is no longer time to forestall or delay. Further, Township Committee remains open to receive and assess additional information and new developments.

Thank you Mayor Marchand and members of Township Committee for acting with due deliberation and with integrity to protect and enhance the quality of life in Princeton.

White Paper Deer Study Is Attempt To Delay Hunt for No Good Reason

To the Editor of Town Topics:

The Princeton Township Committee did well to refuse a two month moratorium on shooting the deer. The offer of a study and a White Paper was simply an attempt to delay it for no good reason.

It has taken years to make the preparations and get the necessary approvals for the shooting now going on. (I think it has also taken courage on the part of Mayor Phyllis Marchand, considering the intemperate personal attacks she has been subjected to.) Everybody has had ample warning for many, many months that this was coming. Why didn't these people start their study last October, so it would have been ready in time? The answer is obvious: because they know very well that no study is going to offer any other practical solution to the problem of too many deer.

The shooting will only take place on the properties of those who permit it. Fortunately, a number of landowners are permitting it. It is reported in TOWN TOPICS [February 28] that a wealthy Princeton resident is offering them $1,000 apiece to withdraw their permission. This seems questionable to me. The property owners who are cooperating by allowing the shooting to proceed on their property, possibly at some inconvenience to themselves, should be commended for making the deer reduction program possible. It does not seem appropriate to me for those who oppose the program, which has been duly authorized by the Township Committee, to be offering monetary inducements to interfere with it.

I've had Lyme disease. My son's car has been badly damaged twice by collisions with deer. Every ten days or so a herd of about six deer wanders through my yard in broad daylight. I'm very glad that we are finally doing something about it.

Enjoyment of Guyot Stream Walkway Owes Its Success to Area Residents

To the Editor of Town Topics:

The efforts to improve the public Guyot Stream Walkway between Moore Street, Harris Road, Jefferson Road, and Carnahan Place continued through 2000.

The following Princeton residents have provided time, plants, or money to make the area more enjoyable for all the community to use: J. Arrington, D. Barlow, the Denards, Harpers, Karchs, Lynchs, Moodys, and Stouts of Jefferson Road; W. Moseley, the Rovira -Rodrigues, and Winarskys of Moore Street; the Starks of Henry Avenue; the Burns, R. Greene, the Kushners, U. Perna, and the Sanders of Harris Road; H. Fichtenbaum of Carnahan Place; the Lapiduses of Leigh Avenue; M. Mendelsohn of Hickory Court, and the Buleys of Witherspoon Street.

For the fourth year many shrubs, plants and bulbs were donated to the area by the Obal Garden Center on Alexander Road and the Belle Meade Co-op on Township Line Road, for which we are most grateful.

Hopefully the community and neighbors will continue to enjoy these improvements over this next year.

Thanks to all the above community members and the Township who made the Guyot Stream area an even more pleasant and interesting place to walk and visit.

Slaughter Is Unpleasant Thought, But Humans Depend on It for Meat

To the Editor of Town Topics:

As an admitted meat-eater, I cannot condemn the deer hunt in town. If I lived in Princeton three hundred years ago I would probably have been quite happy if my husband killed a deer for its meat. Today we pick up ground beef and lamb chops at the grocery store in sanitary wrappings without second thoughts, but knowing that a large scale deer hunt is going on in town is somehow disturbing. Slaughter is not pleasant to think about, but humans depend on it.

A 'Yes' Vote on April School Bond Will Atone for Decades of Neglect

To the Editor of Town Topics:

Our community has a tremendous opportunity this spring. The Princeton Regional School Board has unanimously endorsed a bond issue proposal that will make up for decades of neglect of our school facilities. We believe that they designed a building program that respected both taxpayers' and educational needs.

Princeton has a high school built in 1928, four elementary schools built between 1957 and 1962, and a middle school built in 1963 as an elementary school. These facilities do not serve us adequately today and are an embarrassment to the community. Even our high school accrediting body criticized Princeton High School's facilities as "substandard." The school improvements in the referendum will help us catch up with other high-quality school districts across the country.

We congratulate the school board for its willingness to develop an expansion and renovation plan that will give us the spaces we need for the children of the 21st century. We encourage every voter to join us in voting "yes" for the upcoming bond referendum on April 17th.

Simpler Way Is Needed to Handle Summer Concert Tickets & Lines

To the Editor of Town Topics:

Another wonderful season of Princeton's summer chamber music concerts must now be in the planning stages. Every summer we are fortunate enough to enjoy some of the world's most talented musicians right here at home at Richardson Auditorium, without the hassle of travel, parking and stress that go with trips to New York venues.

But attending these concerts has its own stresses, which — as I have been pointing out (in vain) to the concert committee for several years — are unnecessary.

Those of us who wish to attend an 8 p.m. concert are compelled to line up for ticket distribution which begins at 6 p.m. The line forms by 5:15. The next line begins to form at 7 for the 7:30 entry into the theater. Everyone isn't available at 5:30 or 6 — people have jobs, commutes, family responsibilities. Perhaps this system has been designed to keep out total segments of audiences. It certainly seems that way when you see the sea of grey heads in the audience — these may be the only people who have the time involved to attend.

There is a much simpler way:

Last year, there were at least two events at Richardson, both expected to be full houses — the Brentano Quartet concert (which had some competition from Israeli and Egyptian representatives on campus) and Toni Morrison — who filled every seat.

For both events, the door opened ½ hour before the event and people began to line up just about an hour before the event. They lined up once and entry was smooth.

Another suggestion: (Used at an annual film festival I attend in Colorado) People line up outside the theater as early as one hour before the film. An usher then hands out tickets to those in line. When all the tickets are gone — amen. When you have your ticket, you may leave or wait to get inside.

I appreciate that the concert committee is made up of volunteers — but one would think that they might appreciate some suggestions about making the process a little easier for concert-goers.

Perhaps other readers will have other suggestions.

Deer Hunt Causes Disbelief, Disgust, Dismay; Thank You Protesters for Doing What You Did

To the Editor of Town Topics:

To all the opponents of the deer slaughter, my apologies. I could not quite believe that this community would go through with it, and as a result, I did nothing. I would like to thank Mr. Wiener and all the protesters who did what I should have been doing.

I have lived in this area all my life, have watched the growth and was somehow naive enough to think that we could get along with nature. These animals have no place to go, and the solution that intelligent people came up with was to attract them to food and slaughter them. I am appalled, upset, disheartened; only one word comes to my mind — disgust!

We don't have a deer problem, we have a car problem. Geese in our area present more of a health hazard than deer ever have, and certainly their numbers have increased at a more alarming rate than the deer. But geese don't collide with expensive automobiles and therefore aren't seen as a problem.

Why didn't we take the money used for these so called "hunters" and use it to purchase deer whistles, which could have been distributed free to residents? I had deer whistles for years and never had a collision with a deer. I suspect the problem is that people don't wish to mar their $40,000-plus cars with such things.

Keep up the good work, protesters and put my name on your list!!!

A Thank You from the West Coast For Floyd Campbell's War Memories

To the Editor of Town Topics:

I wish to thank Myrna Bearse for the emotional and sincere article she wrote about my father, Floyd Campbell. I've been able to email all my friends & relatives to read the Town Topics.

As a child Dad shared with myself and siblings his experience during the war and especially Iwo Jima, however, I did not feel the full effect until reading her article.

Myrna, thank you for bringing the sad period out in the open, especially giving Dad the opportunity to share his experience. I've been told by others also to say thank from all the veterans who had similar experiences. Thank you from the west coast.

Institute for Advanced Study Criticized For Allowing Deer Hunt on Its Property

To the Editor of Town Topics:

Following is the text of a letter I have written to Allen I. Rowe, Associate Director of the Institute for Advanced Study, expressing my increasing concern and final, wrathful indignation about the deer massacres. The methods used are absolutely repugnant and barbaric, unworthy of the highly educated society of Princeton, bringing particular disgrace upon the enlightened minds of the Institute:

It is three weeks that I have not seen any of the beloved deer in my backyard, nor has that peaceful herd been grazing anymore in the evening on the meadow below the former Cherniss residence. I can now put two and two together.

I went to the Candlelight Vigil in front of the Township Hall. It was a good turnout of responsible citizens, who afterwards nearly all went to the Township meeting. After many humane, legal and financial arguments had been brought forth, urging an immediate halt to the senseless mass-slaughter of those beautiful and innocent animals, my neighbor Carl Mayer of Battle Road asked the Township Committee point-blank, whether any shooting was taking place on the University or Institute lands.

Mrs. Marchand's, the mayor's, answer was, "this is confidential." Under the scornful protest of the assembly, one of the Township Committee members then declared that the University has refused White Buffalo access to its property and no culling is being carried out on University land.

The Institute for Advanced Study, however, invited the sharpshooters to its land "and the deer have been taken." You should have seen, how all the people froze in shock! The woods that Einstein, the pacifist, loved! is the institute not ashamed to encourage guns and violence there? You thought, you could do it on the sly. in the TOWN TOPICS edition of Wednesday, February 21, on p. 31 were listed the 'White Buffalo Hunt Sites,' but the Institute was not mentioned among them.

You tried to keep it a secret, but the truth has come out. How many deer were killed in the Institute woods? Do you know that the Township administration is now being sued for not publicly announcing the hunting sites two weeks in advance as required by law? What about a completely clandestine activity? [Regrettably, we members of the Institute's community do not fly helicopters for surveillance at night].

Praise and Gratitude Go Out To the 911 Response Crew

To the Editor of Town Topics:

Very recently I had a hard fall at home and dislocated a shoulder. I was able to call 911 and the response was quick.

I have nothing but praise for those who came to help me get to the Princeton Hospital Emergency section and for the orthopedic surgeon, Dr. Michael Jolley, and the attending hospital personnel.

A grateful thank you to each and every one.

Too Much About the Hunt Revolves Around Secrecy

To the Editor of Town Topics:

An as-yet unanswered (to my knowledge, unasked) question. Re: the deer hunt revolves around secrecy. Who are the private property owners allowing the hunt to be held on their lands? How are they benefiting? Their near neighbors have been notified. Are they sworn to secrecy? But we taxpayers, who are funding the shoots, are kept in the dark as to their locations. Together with the helicopter surveillance, there is some feeling of aristocratic control here that is most undemocratic.

At least one problem appears to be receiving more attention than in years past: speeding. When I brought it up at Township Committee meeting Monday (Feb. 26) as being an important part of the car/deer collision problem (as well as car/dog walkers, car/joggers, car/cyclists, car/cars accident problems), I was told additional patrols are being added. Now, if we could have some roadside reflectors and car whistles...

Vibrant, Up-to-Date Selection On Display at Merrick's on Moore

It is a pleasure to step into the stylish elegance of Merrick's, the charming women's shop at 6 Moore Street.

Especially noted for its wonderful selection of party dresses and ball gowns, Merrick's also offers casual and career clothing, knits, separates, sportswear, and cruise wear. An expert sense of style is evident throughout the shop.

Owner Barbara Racich chooses clothes that are distinctive, wearable, and very flattering. "If you love it, you should try it," she says. "Too many people don't treat themselves. Getting dressed should be fun!

IT'S NEW To Us

"Special occasion dressing — from ball gowns to mother-of-the-bride to cocktail dresses — is a specialty for us," she continues. "But we also have casual cothing for all ages. Lots of separates, suits, and double stretch jeans in all colors. We have everything — formal to informal. I like to say we have grocery store clothes to ball gowns!"

Fashion Background

Ms. Racich, who opened Merrick's in 1985, has a background in fashion and is also a color expert. Her mother, Nancy Watkins, now her associate at Merrick's, had a clothing store in Florida, and Ms. Racich grew up in the business.

"I moved to New York and worked for Saks and Mademoiselle Magazine," she recalls. "Then in the late 1970s and early '80s, I started doing personal consultation and shopping, as well as color consultation.

"I was also having trouble finding clothes I liked, and I kept looking for the right location for a store. It was very important for me to be in an environment that I like. Princeton makes me smile when I walk down the street!"

Merrick's struck a chord with shoppers right away, and now many of the regular customers have become friends, reports Ms. Racich. "They like everything, the whole range. Also, people often come in for ball gowns or special occasion dresses, and then find the selection of more informal clothes.

"I try hard to find 'user-friendly' items, easy wearing and easy care," she adds. "We are always traveling to shows looking for new lines, and we're always thinking of our clientele. Of course, we really have to like it to choose it. And there is always a risk involved. As someone said, if you don't have sales, you're not running your business right. You have to take risks, take a chance."

Buying is indeed a challenge, and Ms. Racich strives to keep a fresh look, adding new items all the time. "The selection should be practical and fashionable, fun but comfortable. Also, I can defer to my mother, who is older, and to my daughter, who is younger. I am fortunate to be able to get different points of view.

New Lines

"I think we are set apart in this way because we keep changing. I love to discover an exciting new line. For example, I remember when I started with Misook six years ago, with just three pieces. And now it has done so well."

Another new line has just been added to Merrick's spring collection. Dresses, jackets, and skirts by Ginza offer a charming look in varied colors, with eye-catching coordinating accent trim on hem and sleeve. They are perfect for many settings, including summer evenings at the beach.

"Seasonless" clothes are very popular today, reports Ms. Racich, and lines such as Harari and Misook emphasize this. "You can wear them any time and anywhere. To the islands or to a black tie event," she explains.

"Our Harari line of black chiffon and two-ply silk separates with coordinated prints includes pants, skirts and tops, and everything can be coordinated. It is a lovely feminine look, with Asian influence. And you can mix and match with a short jacket and long black skirt or flowing over-jacket with long pants. It's a wonderful look."

IN FASHION: "We try to have clothes that fit normal-sized women. Size 2 to plus sizes, including X-Plus from Garfield & Marks, Harari, and Eileen Fisher. We work very hard to find new lines." Barbara Racich (right), owner of Merrick's, is shown with her mother and associate, Nancy Watkins, in front of the store.

Eileen Fisher is another favorite line and exclusive at Merrick's in the area. As Ms. Racich points out, "Most of her clothes are very forgiving. The skirts and pants have elastic waists and easy tops. It's easy dressing."

Bright colors are popular for spring, she adds, along with fun black and white checks. One-of-kind blouses made from antique tablecloths offer intriguing and colorful designs, and the Thallon line of shirts and pants is also in demand.

Events This Week

Trunk shows are a Merrick's specialty, and special spring events are starting this week. Friday, Saturday, and Sunday will feature a Bridal/Formal Wear Extravaganza, including such lines as Chetta B, Bright Side, Marisa, Baratelli, Tom and Linda Platt, Kay Chapman, and Carol Peretz. On Friday, March 23 and Saturday, March 24, the new spring collection will be unveiled.

Also known for its wonderful accessories, Merrick's offers the always popular jewelry "browsing drawers," super Diptyque candles, perfumes and soaps (only available elsewhere in New York or in Paris!), scarves, and charming little drawstring linen or silk handbags featuring butterfly, ladybug, or floral design, with matching shoes.

A new line of sterling silver necklaces, rings, bracelets, and key chains by Jeanine Payer Jewelry is handmade and hand-engraved with famous quotations. Wonderful gifts, they are offered in the quotation of your choice.

A few years ago, Mrs. Racich added an enchanting children's area, Merrick's Munchkins, which has proved enormously popular. It specializes in irresistible clothes and gifts for infants and toddlers, including hand-smocked dresses and suits, often made by local seamstresses. Adorable stuffed animals start at $11.

The Munchkins room is even more appealing now, having just been hand-painted with Beatrix Potter characters and other designs, accenting the walls.

"Munchkins has been a wonderful complement to the women's clothes," says Ms. Racich, adding that all in all Merrick's, including Munchkins, has been a dream-come-true.

"It's all I hoped for! A wonderful 16 years. And what sets retail apart in Princeton is the wonderful customers. And of course, we have wonderful employees, including two seamstresses, and basic alterations are free.

Merrick's offers gift certificates, gift wrapping, and sales in June and December. Hours are Monday through Saturday 10 to 6, Thursday until 9, Sunday 12 to 4. 921-0338.

Computer Selection & Repair Service Offered at OM System Solutions, Inc.

The staff at OM System Solutions looks forward to helping you with all your computer needs. Opened last March in the Princeton Shopping Center, in the former location of Clancy Paul, the store specializes in computers for small businesses, but is also active in serving individual customers.

"Our specialty is small businesses," says owner and president Radhey S. Gupta. "If you are a small business, we can take care of all your hardware needs, installation networks, and customized software. We help businesses with from five to 50 employees. We can really provide one-stop solutions for small business customers."

In addition, Mr. Gupta reports a lot of activity with individual customers. "We help them with all the hardware, computers, and in-house, as well as home repairs. We do a lot of on-site service and very often go to people's houses or offices.

"We are the authorized dealer for Dell and Hewlett-Packard computers, and we carry all major brands. Dell is exclusive to us in the area. We also repair all PC-compatible computers."

Computer Specialist

OM System Solutions also sells and repairs printers, fax machines, and as a new service this week, it will sell and repair copy machines

Mr. Gupta, an expert in mathematics and computer science, came to the U.S. from India in 1980. "I studied mathematics and computer science, and then was with IBM, specializing in computers," says the West Windsor resident.

"I always wanted to have something of my own, however, and this location became available. I liked the Shopping Center, and also that this space had formerly been the Clancy Paul location."

Customers are from all over the Princeton area and are all ages and backgrounds, he adds.

"A lot of our individual customers want to be on-line, and we are heavily involved in high-speed Internet access, such as DSL subscriber lines.

"We also provide all assistance and help to customers, including for people who aren't familiar with computers. We have older customers, retired people, and some have never even used a computer. We help them learn to operate it, be comfortable, and not be afraid of it. After all, a computer should make life easier!"

Mr. Gupta and his staff, including manager and computer expert Ryan Farley, who was formerly with Clancy Paul, pride themselves on superior service.

"You really won't find our service anywhere else. "There is always someone here to talk with customers for one or two hours, whatever time you need. Our staff is very knowledgeable, with a lot of expertise.

Personalized Service

"Also, we always ask what you are going to use the computer for. What are your needs? We don't sell it just to sell it. And we don't sell any used computers. The computer is tailored to your needs. We provide very personalized service, and we give you honest advice."

In addition to computers, customers will find a full selection of software, printers, scanners, computer monitors, modems, fax machines, and all accessories, such as printer cables, network cards, printer and toner cartridges, and Norton Antivirus.

"It's important for people to keep the antivirus updated," advises Mr. Gupta. "We also have UPS — Uninterrupted Power Supplies. If the power goes off, it provides back-up."

Prices at OM System Solutions are competitive, he adds. "Our prices are the same as what Dell charges on the Internet, and our overall prices are competitive with any of the major stores, such as Staples or Office Max, etc."

Keeping up with the rapidly changing technology is the biggest challenge, points out Mr. Gupta. "We want to do our best for our customers, and we stay up-to-date. I enjoy meeting the people and helping them with their needs. We have been very pleased and encouraged this past year, and we've had a lot of word-of-mouth with customers. We look forward to continuing to serve them."

OM System Solutions is open Monday through Friday 9 to 6, Saturday 10 to 2. 683-0060. —Jean Stratton

ALL YOU NEED: "Just walk in. You don't have to make an appointment. You can come in and talk to us, or bring in your computer for repair. Everything is done on the premises, and we offer 24-hour turnaround repair service. This is very important." Radhey S. Gupta, owner of OM System Solutions, is pictured near a selection of computer accessories.

THEATER REVIEW

"Picasso at the Lapin Agile"; Absurdity & Profundity In Steve Martin Comedy on Art, Science, and Sex

ART MEETS SCIENCE: "So you're saying you dream the impossible and put it into effect?" Picasso (Benjamin Beckley, left) asks Einstein (Jeffrey Kitrosser), as the skeptical waitress Germaine (Paola Allais) looks on in Steve Martin's Picasso at the Lapin Agile, playing at Theatre Intime for one more weekend, March 8-10.

The scene is a bar in Paris in 1904, one year before Einstein (played by Jeffrey Kitrosser) publishes his Theory of Relativity, three years before Picasso (Benjamin Beckley) paints "Les Demoiselles d'Avignon." The great scientist and the great artist meet and duel for supremacy, as the denizens of the bar look on. In the spirit of a western shootout, Einstein scribbles a mathematical formula, while Picasso dashes off a hasty sketch.

Einstein: Done! (They swap drawings.) It's perfect.

Picasso: Thank you

Einstein: I'm talking about mine.

Picasso: (He studies it.) It's a formula.

Einstein: So's yours.

Picasso: It was a little hastily drawn...Yours is letters.

Einstein: Yours is lines. I

Picasso: My lines mean something.

Einstein: So do mine.

Picasso: Mine is beautiful.

Einstein: (Indicates his own drawing.) Men have swooned on seeing that.

Picasso: Mine touches the heart.

Einstein: Mine touches the head.

Picasso: (Holds his drawing.) Mine will change the future.

Einstein: (Holds his drawing) Oh, and mine won't?

Picasso at the Lapin Agile, Steve Martin's absurdist comedy, currently playing at Theatre Intime on the Princeton University campus, colorfully and humorously portrays this hypothetical meeting of geniuses and the roles of science and art at the dawn of a new age. Mr. Martin's first foray into playwriting, Picasso (1993) plays fast and loose with time, theater conventions and probability, and shows abundant evidence of the writer-movie star's roots in stand-up comedy and his first highly acclaimed role as Saturday Night Live's "wild and crazy guy" in the 1970s.

One-Liners and Comic Banter

The play features a steady stream of one-liners, comic banter and hilarious monologues, as well as much thought-provoking material to set the audience thinking about the nature of genius, celebrity, creativity and the greatest achievements of the twentieth century. As a surprise visitor, who appears surrealistically from the latter half of the twentieth century, observes, "This century, the accomplishments of artists and scientists outshone the accomplishments of politicians and governments."

The material is a bit thin and haphazard at times. The play never gets around to developing the seven male and three female characters and their relationships, nor to exploring what Picasso's great revelation (Cubism?) and Einstein's theory were all about — but the premise is fascinating, the comedy hilarious and the whimsical energy and inventiveness are rich and engaging. Traditional concerns of plot, theme and character development hardly seem relevant here where other diversions are so enjoyable.

Princeton University sophomore Micah Baskir has cast a capable undergraduate ensemble and directed with understanding, clarity and appropriately high spirits. The pace is light and brisk, and the timing is polished and effective. Presented as a 90-minute single act, the play provides a thoroughly entertaining evening.

Mr. Kitrosser's Einstein provides a strong focal point for the production. He is animated, expressive, engaging and energetic. Mr. Beckley's proud, histrionic Picasso is a formidable rival, full of passion in his womanizing as in his art.

Paola Allais, as the practical plainspoken waitress Germaine, leads the colorful regulars of the bar and serves as a strong, witty and sympathetic foil to the intellectual and sexual arrogance of the protagonists. John McMath as the bartender Freddy offers solid support, provocative commentary on the central issues and an interesting break or two through the fourth wall for direct exchanges with the audience.

Scott Eckert, as the older man Gaston, accomplishes a credible age stretch and some off-beat, on-target humor; while Robert Accordino as Picasso's art dealer Sagot, nattily dressed and ready for all opportunities to make money, delivers a couple of colorfully dramatic appearances and an hilarious riff on the difficulties of selling paintings of Jesus, sheep, or male nudes.

"Object of Einstein's Affections

Rebecca Zack plays an alluring, expressive Suzanne, one of Picasso's conquests and the subject of a sketch by him, and Marnie Podos ably takes on a double role as Female Admirer in a short comic bit and the Countess, object of Einstein's affections. John Vennema presents a brief, high-energy cameo as Schmendiman, vying in vain to be the third genius in attendance with his invention of "an inflexible and very brittle building material"; and Michael Ritter as the time-traveling Visitor brings the play to a rousing resolution with his mysterious and surprising arrival from the future.

Allie Tepper's set design effectively portrays the Montmartre bar, with tables downstage, the bar upstage, musical instruments on the white plaster walls, and a large landscape painting with sheep, which goes through a bizarre transformation in the final minutes of the play, shortly before the walls of the set slide away altogether.

Mr. Martin's genius for eccentricity and idiosyncratic, ironic humor blends brilliantly with his aesthetic and scientific subject matter in Picasso at the Lapin Agile. Einstein and Picasso may boast eloquently of their achievements and may even bring the artist and the scientist together here:

Picasso: So you're saying you bring a beautiful idea into being?

Einstein: Yes. We create a system and see if the facts can fit it.

Picasso: So you're not just describing the world as it is?

Einstein: No! We are creating a new way of looking at the world!

Picasso: So you're saying you dream the impossible and put it into effect?

Einstein: Exactly.

Picasso: Brother!

Einstein: Brother! (They hug.)

But Mr. Martin, ever the comedian and ironist, looks on, and, through the mouthpiece of the outspoken, skeptical Germaine, deftly bursts their bubble: "Oh, please. You two are spouting a lot of bullshit and I say the only reason you got into physics and art in the first place is to meet girls."

The play was inspired by Picasso's painting "At the Lapin Agile," which depicts a scene at the famous Lapin Agile (Nimble Rabbit) bar in the Montmartre section of Paris.

It debuted in a production by Chicago's Steppenwolf Theatre Company and went on to run for ten months Off-Broadway in New York in 1995-96.

—Donald Gilpin

Concert Planned By Gordon Bok On March 16

The Princeton Folk Music Society welcomes back singer-songwriter Gordon Bok for a performance at 8:15 p.m. Friday, March 16, at Christ Congregation Church, 50 Walnut Lane.

He is a talented musician and storyteller whose mastery of the 6- and 12-string guitars added to his already well-developed vocal expression to create an unmistakable style that has carried him through decades of being a cherished folk artist.

Much of Mr. Bok's repertory comes from songs he has written and collected that deal with life in Maine and the Maritime Provinces. Dreams, as well as traditional legends and ballads, have always been a source of inspiration for him.

Working with a mythic tale drawn from a series of dreams, he started writing in a new style of story and song. He heard the music as a part of the story - as integral as the lyrics. This work would eventually become "Seal Djirl's Hymn", followed by several more of these cantefables, including "Peter Kagan and The Wind" and

Gordon Bok

"Another Land Made of Water". He has recorded over 20 albums, and many other musicians have recorded his songs.

A reviewer for The Village Voice described Gordon Bok as "one of the most moving performers I have ever seen. He expresses the core of his experience with his full deep voice and masterful guitar playing." Time Magazine called him "The poet laureate of those who go down to the sea in ships."

Admission is $12; $8 for members of the Folk Music Society and affiliated organizations; and $3 for children age 11 and under. The next event in this concert series will be a performance on April 20 by Neal and Leandra. There are no advance sales; ample free parking is available.

For further information about these and other Folk Music Society events, call 799-0944.

Peking Acrobats Plan Appearance in Princeton

Variety said of this troupe, "'A' is for acrobat and astounding, amusing, audacious and accomplished, accurate and attractive and admirable, all of which describe, though not completely, The Peking Acrobats."

Tickets are $25 and $28.

Female Jazz Ensemble Will Perform at PHS

Princeton High School will present Sherrie Maricle and Diva, an internationally renowned, all female big band/jazz ensemble, on Monday, March 12 at 7:30 in the PHS auditorium.

Weekend of "Rock, Rejoice" Due at University Chapel

On Saturday, March 10, the Princeton University Chapel will present a concert performed by the Danielson Famile, a band of musicians described by Spin Magazine as one of "the most joyously eccentric group of performers to ascend the New Jersey Turnpike since Sun Ra's Arkestra."

Raised on their father's gospel songwriting which was deeply rooted in American and gospel music, the family of five siblings grew up with a reverence for a deeply personal and spiritual song form, one that relished not only the song itself, but also the relationships which formed around that song. Now joined by three "adopted" family members, the group performs music that sounds as if the Carter Family and the Jackson 5 were invited to collaborate for a Sun Session with Black Francis sitting in on lead vocals — a strange and fascinating collision of sounds and contexts.

Their songs have been described as chronicles of spiritual struggle and their music is "rooted in family and religion and imbued with a simple moral imperative that's at once dynamic and eerie, but never less than riveting," writes music critic David Daley. The concert, which is free of charge, will take place in the Chapel at 8 p.m.

On Sunday morning, as part of the Rock and Rejoice! weekend events, the 11 o'clock Chapel service will feature preacher Anne Graham Lotz from the AnGeL Ministries in Raleigh, NC. She is the daughter of Billy Graham and a well-known preacher in her own right.

World Premiere Due at McCarter By Ballet Company

American Repertory Ballet (ARB) is launching a new initiative, Dancing Through the Ceiling, to increase opportunities for women choreographers to create and present new work and to address the issue that women have traditionally been underrepresented as ballet choreographers in comparison with their male counterparts.

ARB Artistic Director, Graham Lustig said, "It seems to me that for far too long the voices of women in the ballet have been silent in an art form that is appreciated and commonly performed by more workmen than men. To get to the essence of this inequality, I have requested that the selected women choreographers' new creations reflect, comment, or show the viewpoints they personally hold as women working in the language of ballet."

The world premiere of Dancing Through the Ceiling will be held on Thursday, March 15 at 8 p.m. at McCarter Theatre. This premiere also includes a pre-performance symposium hosted by leading critics and choreographers which will be open to the public at 6:30 p.m. at no extra charge.

Dancing Through the Ceiling is comprised of four distinct elements: creation, presentation, education and repertory. To initiate the creation of the project, Mr. Lustig invited three female choreographers to set original choreography on ARB's dancers during December, January and February.

Three Choreographers

The three chosen for this year's project are Susan Hadley, the former Mark Morris dancer who serves on the faculty of Ohio University; Dominique Dumais, a freelance choreographer formerly of National Ballet of Canada; and ARB Ballet Mistress and choreographer Elaine Kudo.

Ms. Kudo, a New Jersey-based artist who is creating her third choreographic work for ARB, is a former soloist with American Ballet Theatre and Twyla Tharp. Once performed, the works will become part of ARB's repertory.

Immediately prior to the performance, leading dance critics and choreographers will moderate an educational symposium for dancers, choreographers and the public. The symposium will provide a crucial platform for women artists, choreographers and the dance community to exchange ideas and discuss parallel issues that women face today in the arts and the world-at-large.

Tickets are $38, $32 and $26 and can be purchased by calling the box office at 258-2787. For group sales, contact (732) 249-1254 or visit the ARB website at www.arballet.org.

MUSIC REVIEW

Music For a 17th Century Dinner Courtesy of The Dryden Ensemble

A solid group of Baroque aficionados took a break from the snow warnings on Saturday night and came to Trinity Church to hear the Dryden Ensemble present Parisian Airs — a selection of musical works from the time of Louis XIV. For this evening's performance, the ensemble was comprised of traverse flutist Colin St. Martin, oboist Jane McKinley, violinist Claire Jolivet, viol player Lisa Terry, harpsichordist Webb Wiggins, and guest tenor soloist Tony Boutté, and music was featured from several late seventeenth and early eighteenth-centuries.

Louis XIV was a great supporter of music, and French instrumental and vocal composition flourished within his court. The Dryden Ensemble chose to present four instrumental works from this period and two vocal cantatas based on mythological themes. Throughout the concert, the instrumentalists consistently achieved a good blend in their various combinations, and Mr. Boutté was a real treat for the evening in his two featured cantatas. One had the impression during the course of the evening that the audience was eavesdropping on someone's late seventeenth-century court dinner.

The five instrumentalists were featured in the opening piece, a Chaconne from Pièces en Trio by Marin Marais, composed in 1692. The acoustics of Trinity were perfectly suited to the Dryden Ensemble, and enabled the players to achieve a nice balance.

Pièces en Trio were scored by Mr. Marais for any combination of treble instrument and figured bass, and the Dryden Ensemble re-scored the pieces for the treble instruments available to them on Saturday evening. Mr. St. Martin and Ms. Jolivet created an especially nice musical sound with Ms. Terry on her newly-constructed seven-string viol. In the "B" section of the piece, Ms. Terry played well with Ms. McKinley on the oboe. Mr. Wiggins, as with the other pieces on the program, was clear in his continuo playing from the harpsichord, but never obtrusive on the instrumental palette.

The instrumental works for the evening also included pieces by Antoine Forqueray, Jean-Philippe Rameau, and Francois Couperin. The viol had a chance to be featured in Forqueray's Le Carillon de Possy. When Ms. Terry introduced her newly-constructed viol to the audience, she commented on the lower register now available to her. This was evidence in Le Carillon as she was able to produce a very smooth and even tone from her instrument.

Lo Cupis by Rameau featured a conversation between the flute and viol, supported by the harpsichord. Ms. Terry demonstrated very tricky double stops from the viol, with Mr. St. Martin accurately providing the counterpart flute.

Mr. Boutté was clearly the feature of both the first and second half. The first half cantata, Michel Pignolet de Montéclair's cantata Pon et Sirinx includes four sets of alternating recitatives and solos, with varying accompanying instruments. Mr. Boutté has good command of all parts of his register and the style of the music, and his French was consistent throughout both cantatas he performed. He has an appealing voice to listen to, and was personable to the audience.

Distinctive Musical Effects

Several different musical effects were achieved in Pon et Sirinx. In the first aria "La beauté peu durable," Mr. Boutté performed essentially o Capello with very light viol accompaniment. The third aria "La Déesse nous apelle" required violinist Ms. Jolivet to play in a very hard and harsh style, imitating hunting horn calls. The last recitative "Deja Sirinx parcouroit l'Erimanthe" required Mr. Boutté to sing microtones and slides between pitches, one of the hallmarks of early Baroque music.

The cantata which closed the concert, Nicolas Clérambault's Orphée, told the story of Orpheus and Euridice. Much of the orchestration was in the treble part of the instruments, for instance the Air "Monarque redouté" was scored for flute, violin, and the upper register of the harpsichord. As with the de Montéclair cantata, movements flowed seamlessly because Mr. Boutté's tuning was so good.

This program was extremely well prepared by the Dryden Ensemble, and very well received by their audience. There were a few shaky or untuned entrances here and there, but the Dryden Ensemble used the acoustics to their advantage to create a well-blended sound and a courtly effect.

Although the Dryden Ensemble's next local performance will not be until late spring, the programming for their upcoming benefit for the Doylestown Hospital Community Arboretum is worth noting for its unusual offerings and the Ensemble's unique approach to music.

The Ensemble has chosen to present seventeenth-century composer Marin Marais' "musical description of his own successful bladder operation." For the less organically inclined, the concert will also include music of Bach, Handel and Vivaldi. Information about this and other Dryden Ensemble events can be obtained by calling the Dryden Ensemble at (609) 466-8541.

CONCERTS AT RICHARDSON: Pianist Christine McLeavey will join the Princeton University Orchestra and conductor Michael Pratt in concerts on March 9 and 10 in Richardson Auditorium.

University Orchestra To Feature Winners Of Competition

The Princeton University Orchestra, under the direction of Michael Pratt, will present concerts on Friday and Saturday, March 9 and 10, at 8 p.m. in Richardson Auditorium on the University campus. Featured soloists will be two winners of the University Concerto Competition, junior Seth Baer, bassoon, and senior Chrtstine McLeavey, piano.

Mr. Pratt and the orchestra will open the concert with the Leonore Overture No. 3 by Beethoven.

The orchestra's string section will be featured next, in the most popular work of the British composer Ralph Vaughan Williams, his Fantasia on a Theme by Thomas Tallis, for double string orchestra and solo quartet.

After intermission, Seth Baer will join the orchestra for Mozart's Concerto for Bassoon and Orchestra in B-flat Major, K. 191.

Mr. Baer, a music major at Princeton, is studying bassoon with Frank Morelli. He has recently become a substitute for the Philadelphia Orchestra, and has played such works as Stravinsky's Le Sacre du Printemps with the ensemble. He is also a member of the Haddonfield Symphony, performing regularly on their subscription series.

He also serves as principal bassoon of the Princeton University Orchestra. The past winter, he returned for a second year to perform with the New York String Orchestra Seminar as principal bassoon in two concerts at Carnegie Hall.

To conclude the program, Christine McLeavey will join Mr. Pratt and the Orchestra for a performance of Serge Prokofiev's Piano Concerto No. 3 in C Major. Ms. McLeavey is pursuing a degree in Physics and a certificate in Musical Performance.

She began playing the piano at age 4 and has studied under Donald Rankin in Rhode Island, Theodore Lettvin in New Jersey, Ian Brown of the Nash Ensemble in London, and Masako Hayashi-Ebbesen at Princeton University.

She currently studies at the Westminster Choir College of Rider University with Ingrid Clarfield. Ms. McLeavey regularly appears as soloist and accompanist for Friends of Music at Princeton student recitals, as well as for numerous Music 213 and 214 concerts.

THE CAPITOL STEPS, a comedy group, will star in a benefit for Corner House Foundation scheduled for March 30 in Lawrenceville.

Capitol Steps Troup To Star March 30 For Corner House

Hold on to your ballots! The chads will be flying on Friday evening, March 30, when the nationally acclaimed comedy troupe, the Capitol Steps, brings its irreverent, side-splitting brand of bipartisan political satire to Princeton to benefit Corner House Foundation. The event will be held at The Artillery in Lawrenceville.

Song, parody, and equal-opportunity ribbing are the mainstays of this fast and funny group, which has delighted audiences across the country. Given the stranger-than-fiction state of American politics, the troupe is never at a loss for inspiration.

The events of the last few months have been a real treasure trove, with a surreal presidential election, a parade of larger-than-life personalities, fractured presidential syntax, controversial pardons, and the always-fascinating transfer of power from Democrats to Republicans.

Be on the lookout for appearances by Dubya and Laura, Bill and Hillary, Al and Tipper, Joe and Hadassah, Dick Cheney, Jesse Ventura, Ralph Nader, John Ashcroft, our own Christie Whitman, and that master of mayhem, Alan Greenspan. Oh yes, and the Supremes — the Supreme Court, that is.

A limited number of tickets are still available for the gala reception, dinner, and show. For more information, call Karen Lomax at 924-4821 or Kathy France at 683-5759.

For the past 28 years, Corner House, a nonprofit counseling agency, has been an integral part of Princeton life, helping area adolescents and their families tackle the problems of addiction and its related health and social issues. Proceeds from the annual fundraiser directly benefit the agency's programs, ensuring that no teen or family in crisis is turned away.

BeauSoleil Peformance Planned at McCarter

As America's beloved ambassadors of Cajun music, BeauSoleil's trail stretches from Louisiana's bayous to New York's Carnegie Hall, around the world, and back again. Led by fiddler Michael Doucet, the Grammy award winning recording group two-steps into McCarter Theatre on Friday, March 9 at 8 p.m.

The New York Times wrote, "BeauSoleil started out as a crusade and then, sometime in the last 25 years, expanded into a party. Years ago Michael Doucet realized that the best way to spread the music was to keep its good-time spirit."

Now in its third decade, BeauSoleil has secured its position as America's most popular Cajun group. BeauSoleil has preserved the rich Cajun musical traditions of Louisiana, while adding elements of zydeco, New Orleans jazz, Tex-Mex, country, blues and more.

Joining BeauSoleil will be special guests Cindy Cashdollar, on dobro and steel guitar; slide guitar virtuoso Sonny Landreth, known for his work as lead guitarist for Zydeco legend Clifton Chenier's Red Hot Louisiana Band; and reed player Carl Landry, who is known as the honking king of Swamp Pop and Zydeco music.

Tickets are $25 and $28. To charge tickets by phone, call 258-2787 or visit McCarter online at www.mccarter.org.

Pinter Play to Open At George Street

Old Times, a play by Harold Pinter, will be performed at George Street Playhouse in New Brunswick. It will open March 17 and run through April 15.

Ethan McSweeny, new associate artistic director, will direct. Lisa Harrow, a veteran of the Royal Shakespeare Company in England, is one of the three stars.

In the play, which first opened in 1971, a married couple entertains a friend, only to find that details of the years gone by seem a little blurrier than they supposed. Rivalries evolve over who owns which memories, and the nature of their relationship, past and present, is placed in doubt.

Tickets range from $24-40 through the box office, (732) 246-7717.

Ms. Gennaro has received many awards, including the Polich Art Works First Recipient Bronze Casting Award in 1999. She has exhibited widely across the U.S. and abroad. Next year, the Washington County Museum of Fine Arts in Haggerstown, Md., will feature an exhibit by Ms. Gennaro.

Tigers Clinch Share of Ivy Crown With Key Road Wins at Yale, Brown

ANDRE'S KICKIN' IT: Andre Logan, #30, skyed for this rebound against Yale on Friday. The Tigers moved into sole possession of first place with an impressive 60-49 road win over the Bulldogs (Photo by Bill Allen/HJ SportAction)

The Princeton University men's basketball team did what needed to be done last weekend, winning 60-49 at Yale on Friday night, and 64-55 at Brown on Saturday. The Tigers clinched at least a share of the Ivy League title with the victories.

Penn lost 85-77 at Brown on Friday, but rebounded for a 63-38 victory at Yale the following night. The Bears and Bulldogs were eliminated from the league race, leaving Princeton and Penn to fight it out for the 14th straight season.

The last time Princeton and Yale met, Neil Yanke was sidelined with a sprained ankle, and unable to play for the Bulldogs. This time he was in the lineup. It didn't matter.

Princeton center Nate Walton was a man on a mission. From the opening tap, it was obvious that he wanted the ball. He gave the Tigers an early 2-0 lead, and when the score got too close at 4-3, he drained a shot from beyond the arc to widen the margin.

Walton drained another three late in the half, matching the team's biggest lead at 31-19. He finished the half with 14 of his game-high 17 points, and the Tigers enjoyed a 31-21 lead at the break.

Yale rumbled back in the second half, cutting the lead to 41-39 after Yanke scored, was fouled, and converted the free throw. Princeton threw a leash on the Bulldogs midway through the half with excellent defense, and a 9-0 run. Andre Logan, who finished with nine points, started the Tigers rally with a shot off the glass and a 43-39 lead.

He sank two free throws, and the Tigers led 45-39. Mike Bechtold, who finished with 10 points, drained a three pointer with 6:45 remaining to give Princeton a 48-39 lead. Konrad Wysocki capped the run with an off balance shot, and a 50-39 margin. He finished with eight points.

Yale could get no closer than seven points during the remaining five minutes of the game. It was a big blow to their Ivy League title hopes, and it showed in their poor performance the following night against Penn.

The rest of the league was playing follow the leader after Friday night, and the Tigers were the ones marching in front of the pack. Princeton rolled into Providence, Rhode Island, for a battle with Brown University on Saturday. The Bears and Quakers were tied for second.

A Brown victory would put the team in position for the league title. A loss, and the Bears' season would be over.

Taking Care of Business

The Tigers took care of business from the start. Walton scored the team's first seven points, and when Logan sank a three-point shot, Princeton suddenly held a commanding 10-2 lead. The lead grew to 12-2 when guard Ed Persia converted an easy layup.

Brown's Earl Hunt cut the lead to 12-5 with a shot from beyond the arc, but Walton answered with a three of his own for a 15-5 Princeton lead. He finished with 13 points in the half, and 17 for the game.

The Bears' Patrick Powers cut the deficit to four at 25-21 with a fastbreak layup and 5:52 remaining in the half. Bechtold and Kyle Wente answered with back-to-back treys, and the margin was 31-21. The half ended with an amazing high arching shot off the glass by C.J. Chapman that gave Princeton a 39-30 lead. He finished with five points in the first half, ten for the game.

The Brown coaching staff took Walton out of the game in the second half. He picked up his third foul with 54 seconds gone in the quarter, and when the Bears' Shaun

Lady beetles and flower flies are the first conspicuous beneficial insects to appear in the spring. Each of these predators feed primarily on aphids and occasionally pine bark adelgids. The presence of these desirable insects is encouraged by a diversity of flowering plants in the landscape.

Beneficial insects are attracted to brightly colored petals and may use pollen and nectar produced by these plants as a supplementary food course. Reproductive activity of beneficial insects may be stimulated by these plant products.

...

Lady beetles are most commonly called lady bird beetles and ladybugs. These insects are known by some 250 different names in 50 languages. Nearly all are a reference to the Virgin Mary or God.

...

Adult lady beetles are first noticed during warm winter days crawling about on warm sunny surfaces. The insects return to overwintering sites when cold weather resumes.

...

Most people plagued by swarms of these lady beetles are in a quandry as to whether to endure the bothersome presence for the sake of their good reputation and potential usefulness later on or to eliminate them as nuisances.

...

Flower flies are also known as hover flies. Adults are the flies with two pair of membranous wings. Their bodies are generally brightly colored yellows and blacks and often resemble bees. Flower flies are generally about ¼ inch in length. Flower flies do not bite or sting humans.

...

Adults feed on pollen and often are seen hovering above plants. Their larvae are effective predators of aphids. If you're not sure of just what insects are flying about your garden, give us a call at 924-3500.

Tiger Lacrosse Opens Season Beating Hopkins, Next Test Will Come Saturday against Virginia

In the calm before the storm, indeed on a pleasant Saturday in early March when the typical hype surrounding an impending blizzard seemed totally out of place, the Princeton lacrosse team gave convincing proof that come spring or two feet of snow it will once again be part of the Final Four on Memorial Day weekend.

Opening their season before more than 4,100 fans, the second largest crowd ever in Class of 1952 Stadium, the Tigers thoroughly dominated Johns Hopkins, 8-4. The contest was not as close as the score would indicate, and certainly not as tight as seven of last 12 meetings when the outcome was decided by one goal.

The victory will keep the Orange and Black right behind top-ranked Syracuse in the national polls. The 2-0 Orangemen whipped third-ranked Virginia, 13-7, in the Carrier Dome on Saturday. They blew a close game open at the start of the second period with three man-up tallies when the Cavaliers were hit with a three-minute unreleaseable penalty for an illegal stick.

Coach Bill Tierney's troops will be back in action at home this Saturday against this 1-1 Virginia team, which opened its season with a 12-8 triumph over Towson. Old Nassau and the Cavaliers have a history of memorable games against each other

Princeton has lost three straight, and five of last six regular season contests to the team from Charlottesville, last winning in overtime in 1997. But in postseason play over the same time span, the Tigers are 3-0, including two overtime victories in the NCAA championship game. Last year it dropped a 15-8 decision in early March, but gained revenge with a 13-12 triumph in the semifinals of the Final Four.

Hopkins Humbled from Start

Johns Hopkins, which once had a 24-game winning streak against Princeton, but has lost nine of the last 12, came in with a new coach, Dave Pietramala, a Hopkins grad, who had been Cornell's head coach for just three seasons. He was a top defenseman for the Blue Jays when Tierney was just starting his career here.

Saturday, Pietramala got a good look at what may be the best defense in the nation. His team was shutout in the entire first half, and didn't score its first goal until part way into the third period. By that time the Tigers owned a 4-1 lead, and by the time Hopkins managed to score again in the fourth period, Old Nassau had all but locked up the outcome with an 8-1 advantage.

"Other than the fourth quarter, I don't

Tiger Basketball

Etheridge backed in towards the basket, Walton was whistled for his fourth foul, much to his dismay.

Logan was whistled for his fourth foul with 16:57 remaining, and he joined Walton on the bench. Princeton's two best passers were not going to be a factor for awhile.

Answering the Call

When Hunt drained a shot from beyond the arc with 12:15 remaining, the Tigers' lead was just 44-42, the closest Brown had been since the opening tip. As he has done all season, Wente answered the call with a big three to give Princeton a 47-42 lead.

Wysocki converted an easy layup, after a Brown free throw, to give Princeton a 49-43 lead. Etheridge's layup with 8:45 remaining made the score 49-45. Wysocki answered with another layup, and the lead was 51-45.

Chapman widened the gap with a three pointer, and the Princeton lead was 54-45. Walton returned with 4:21 remaining, and sank two free throws that gave the team its biggest lead of the half at 62-50.

Poor shot selection and offensive impatience was the Bears' achilles heel. Hunt is normally money in the bank for the team, but he hardly touched the ball down the stretch. The Bears made just three shots from beyond the arc.

Princeton played excellent defense and rose to the occasion when its top two passers exited with four fouls. This team has proven that it can play with any combination. Head coach John Thompson III has this team believing in themselves, and each other.

Princeton was scheduled to play Penn, weather permitting, at Jadwin Gymnasium on Tuesday night. A win would give the Tigers an automatic NCAA Tournament berth. A Penn victory would force a playoff game at Lehigh University, most likely on Saturday. —Steve Allen think we could have played much better defensively," Tierney commented after the game. Overall my impression was that we won a great game, but I think we made a lot of mistakes, too."

Few if any came on defense. The unit was led by Damien Davis, Ryan Mollett and Scott Farrell, whose play allowed the visitors precious little around the Tiger cage. And what they couldn't stop, senior goalie Trevor Tierney (19 saves) did.

The Princeton offense took a while to get moving, not scoring until 5:52 had elapsed in the first quarter, and then not again until the second period. The textbook tally came when Matt Streibel, passed from behind the net to a wide open Dan Clark cutting straight in front. His shot easily beat Hopkins goalie Rob Scherr (12 saves).

Sparkling Debut by Boyle

A pretty move toward the net gave Will MacColl an unassisted tally 3:29 into the second period, and two minutes later Streibel made it 3-0 on an assist from Ryan Boyle. The assist was the first of four on the day for the heralded freshman and Gilman School grad, billed as the top high school lacrosse player in the country.

"He's far ahead of any other freshman I have ever had," Tierney said. "He has amazing vision and remarkable understanding for a young player. He is going to be an all-time great."

Before the half ended Boyle had set up B.J. Prager for his first of two goals, and a 4-0 lead. Prager looked fully recovered from the season-ending injury that sidelined him for the last six games last spring.

Hopkins finally got on the scoreboard 4:11 into the third quarter, but any thoughts of a switch in momentum were soon buried under a four-goal response by Old Nassau. In a span of less than three minutes Chris Harrington scored from the outside on a pretty shot, and Prager and Clark both got their second tally. When Sean Hartofilis' unassisted goal made it 8-1 near the end of the third period, the Tigers offense was through for the afternoon.

Hopkins got three in the final quarter, but there was to be no repat of two years ago when the Blue Jays were last in town. In March of 1999, Princeton rolled to a 9-3 lead, but Hopkins pulled out a 12-11 triumph. —Jeb Stuart

Last year's game against Syracuse on Easter Sunday drew the largest crowd ever to Class of '52 Stadium: 4,725. The Loss of Its Top Three Pitchers Shakes Up Tiger Baseball Rotation

Princeton University third-year baseball coach Scott Bradley was counting on the arms of Chris Young, Scott Hindman and Tommy Crenshaw this season to lead his team to the promised land. Unfortunately for Bradley and the rest of the team, the road to glory, the NCAA Tournament that is, will have to be paved by someone else.

Young signed a contract with the Pittsburgh Pirates, and forfeited his final two years of [sports] eligibility at Princeton. Is Bradley hanging his head over the loss of his ace, who was 5-0 last season with a 1.82 ERA?

"Chris is in a better place," Bradley commented. "There is never a sure thing in baseball, but he was as close as it gets. It was nice to have him in a game knowing if we scored two runs, the game was over."

Hindman, a sophomore, will miss the season after undergoing Tommy John surgery to correct an elbow problem. "He was recruited by just about everybody in the country," said Bradley. "He is pretty close to being in Chris' category."

Crenshaw Leaves School

Crenshaw broke his wrist during football season. The injury forced the junior from Pompano Beach, Florida to leave school for one year.

Doctors had to cast his wrist awkwardly, which kept him from typing and writing. In the Ivy League, students taking a leave from school must do so for an entire year, not just one semester.

With three prominent pitchers gone, who will step in and fill their shoes?

Sophomore Ryan Quillian (4-2 last year) and junior Tom Rowland (2-4 last year) are expected to be weekend starters, along with David Boehle, another sophomore who earned nine saves as a freshman in 2000.

"With Chris (Young) around last season, we had the luxury of using Boehle as a closer," said Bradley. "Boehle's too good to be in the bullpen, so he'll be in the starting rotation this season."

Junior Chris Higgins will most likely occupy the fourth spot in the Tigers' rotation. "He pitched a lot of innings for us last year, and is more than capable of stepping into the starting rotation," Bradley commented.

If for some reason Higgins can't go, Middletown, Connecticut freshman Brian Biegan will step in.

Junior hurlers Nick Pappas and Bill Broome, and freshman Tom Pauly will be used sparingly in the mid-week games. Bradley hopes to use one of the three as a closer this season.

First baseman Andrew Hanson and outfielder Max Krance are returning for their final season at Princeton. Hanson smacked five homers last season, and finished with a batting average of .360. Krance hit .357 and drove in 47 runs in 2000. "They were the two best hitters in the league last year," said Bradley. "They need to duplicate that performance this season."

Pat Boran

Junior shortstop Pat Boran will receive a lot of attention from pro scouts this season. He hit .343, scored 32 runs, and collected 31 RBIs last season. "He is one of the best players in the league, in terms of pro ability, and being able to play at the next level," Bradley explained. "The scouts will be out to see him."

Senior second baseman Tim Phillips, who batted .296 last season will occupy the same spot again this year. While Hanson shores up first base, junior Eric Voelker will occupy the other corner, third base.

Krance will most likely play right field, while senior Mickey Martin, a Bridgewater native, will play center. Martin hit .313 last season.

Senior John Watterson and junior Ryan Achterberg will vie for the left field position. Watterson had the stronger bat last year, finishing with an average of .352. Achterberg's batting average was .300. Senior Casey Hildreth will probably be the starting catcher again this season.

"I Like the Guys"

"I like the guys we have," said Bradley. "There may be a little stress on our pitching depth. At times we may be playing games without the quality of pitching that we had in the past."

The Tigers are looking to repeat as Ivy League champions this season, and hope to fare better in the NCAA Tournament. In 12 appearances, they have won just one game.

Last season Princeton defeated Dartmouth for the league crown, but was beaten in double elimination action, 4-2, by Houston. The Orange and Black was eliminated from the tournament after a 10-1 loss to Texas Tech.

Princeton opens its season on Friday against Southwest Missouri State (11:30 a.m.) and Oklahoma State (3 p.m.) in a doubleheader. Its first Ivy League game will be a doubleheader on March 31 against Yale.

Win, Tie Boost PU Hockey to 7th Place in ECAC; Tigers Will Face Cornell in Quarterfinal Round

All aboard for Ithaca.

The Princeton hockey team, buoyed by a 2-0-2 record in its last four games, will head to upper New York state this weekend to face Cornell in the quarterfinal round of the Eastern College Athletic Conference playoffs. If coach Len Quesnelle's troops continue their late-season surge, they have a decent opportunity to go on to Lake Placid for the league championship series March 15-17.

Princeton entered last weekend in eighth place, and with a 4-1 triumph over Brown in Providence Friday night, and a 2-2 tie with Harvard in Cambridge 24 hours later, finished the regular season in seventh. Wins by Dartmouth and Rensselaer, who finished in a tie for fifth, wiped out any lingering chance of home ice advantage.

The series in Ithaca will begin Friday night, continue on Saturday, with a third game if necessary Sunday. The first team to reach three points will advance to the Final Five in Lake Placid. That series has a play-in round on Thursday for the two lowest seeded teams, two semifinal contests on Friday night, and championship and consolation games on Saturday.

The match-up with the Big Red will be interesting. Cornell, which has lost three of its last four, had been in first place briefly earlier last month, but has not been at its best recently. Last weekend at home it lost to RPI and defeated Union, both by score of 2-1.

Defensive Battle

It's difficult to see anything but a defensive struggle between these two teams, with overtime a distinct possibility in every contest. A two-goal lead at any point will be huge. In its 22 ECAC games, Cornell scored exactly as many goals as it allowed – 44. The goals scored was far less than any other team in the conference, except last-place Brown, which tallied 43. The goals allowed was the least of any team in the league by a wide margin, except first-place Clarkson, which allowed 45.

The Orange and Black scored 26 more times than the Big Red, and allowed 22 more. However, Old Nassau enters next weekend with perhaps the hotest goalie in the league at the moment in Dave Stathos. He has allowed just eight goals in his last six games. Cornell's Matt Underhill is no slouch either. The junior goalie finished with a 1.80 goals against average, second-best in the league. Stathos was ninth with a 2.85 average.

Princeton, which finished the season as the second-most penalized team in the league (400 minutes) behind Union, had better keep its cool. It will face a team that finished first in special teams play, led by a penalty-killing unit that allowed just seven goals in 91 chances. On the flip side, Cornell was fifth in power play percentage, the Tigers eighth, and they are zero for their last 16 chances. One stupid penalty could help the decide the outcome of a game.

The Tigers have a positive record against the Big Red in four previous playoff contests. The first time the two met in an ECAC preliminary round at the end of the 1993-94 season, Cornell squeezed out a 5-4 triumph in Ithaca. Princeton hasn't lost since. In the magical season when it reached the NCAA Tournament for the only time in its history, the Orange and Black knocked off Cornell, 6-2, in March of 1998 in the play-in round of the Final Five. A year later playing its first ever quarterfinal games in Baker Rink, Old Nassau scored a tie and a win over Cornell to advance to Lake Placid again.

Tiger Hockey

But past history will mean nothing this weekend. A key mistake here or there could be all one team or the other needs to gain the advantage. Getting the first goal will be incredibly important. Cornell scored first in Ithaca when the two met in December, and went on to post a 3-0 shutout. Princeton gained the upper hand early in the February rematch, playing perhaps its best game of the season in a 4-1 triumph.

Revenge Gained in Providence

If Princeton had lost a second time to the basement-dwelling Bruins, it would not have deserved to go to the playoffs. It fell in Baker, 5-3, in January, and Quesnelle's skaters had to prove to themselves they could put away the worst team in the league.

It was not an auspicious beginning. The first period was barely two minutes old when a Tiger defenseman coughed up the puck in his own zone, and Brown scored at the 2:18 mark. It took Princeton 13 minutes, but it finally tied the score at 18:11. Dave Bennett took the puck up ice, and found George Parros. His shot toward the net was tipped past Brown goalie Yann Denis by David Del Monte.

The deadlock lasted through much of the second period, but two goals just 1:27 apart by the Tigers sent them on the way to the victory. With 3:10 left in the second stanza, Scott Prime slapped in the rebound of a shot by Chris Owen. Less than 90 seconds later sophomore defenseman Neil McCann did a fine job of keeping the puck in the offensive zone, and sent it over to Brad Parsons. Parsons set up Parros, whose tally gave the Tigers a 3-1 advantage.

With Stathos in firm control, Brown could not make any headway in the third, and Shane Campbell put the icing on the cake with an empty net goal at 19:41. Stathos finished with 31 saves.

A Tie in Cambridge

The 2-2 tie the next night against Harvard still left the Tigers with a solid measure of satisfaction. When the two played here in January, Princeton took a 2-0 lead, only to lose, 5-4. This time the Tigers spotted the Cantabs a 2-0 advantage, and then rallied for the tie in the final frame.

The first period was marked by wide open play by both teams, each getting off 13 shots, but neither goalie was beaten. Princeton finished with 40 shots on goal, Harvard 39. Catching Princeton on a line change, the Crimson broke the scoreless deadlock at 5:28 of the second to take a 1-0 lead. Near the end of the period, it increased that advantage to 2-0 when its fourth line tallied against Princeton's.

SOLID DOWN THE STRETCH: The play of two freshmen, Chris Owen (left), and Matt Magilone has been a big plus for the Tiger hockey team the last couple of weeks in its battle for a spot in the playoffs.

Entering the third period, the Orange and Black had 24 shots and nothing to show for its efforts. Parsons changed that with an incredible individual effort. First he made a great move to get around Harvard defenseman Tim Stay, and then beat goalie Oliver Jonas with a wrist shot from the left circle, while falling to the ice. Minutes later Parsons scored what appeared to be the tying goal, but it was disallowed when the referee ruled that the net had been knocked out of place.

Midway through the third, persistent forechecking by Ethan Doyle set up the tying goal. He found Shane Campbell alone in front of the net, and the senior forward beat Jonas with a high wrist shot.

Regulation time ran out, forcing a five-minute overtime, but neither team could muster much of an attack, each getting just two shots on goal. And as things turned out a win would not have moved Princeton any further up in the standings.

SLAPSHOTS: Quesnelle's first season as coach may turn out to be quite similar to Don Cahoon's last. Cahoon finished the 1999-00 campaign with an ECAC record of 8-9-4 (one Vermont game was cancelled) good for a tie for sixth place, and an overall mark of 10-16-4, after being defeated by Clarkson in the quarterfinal playoff round, 3-2, and 2-1 in Potsdam. Quesnelle's league mark is 9-9-4, and his overall record is 10-14-5 at the moment.

HE'S SEEING STARS: Princeton High senior forward Bob Davison is surrounded by four Nottingham players during NJSIAA Tournament action from March 1. He finished his high school athletic career with 34 points in the Tigers' loss to the Northstars.

Davison Scores 34; Yet PHS Eliminated From NJSIAA Tourney

"The key to what happened was evident by just looking at the scoreboard," Princeton High coach Gene Mosley said, referring to his team's rematch with Nottingham in the NJSIAA Group III Central Tournament quarterfinals. The Northstars avenged a season opening 58-54 loss to the Tigers with an 83-66 victory on Thursday night.

"The score was in an area where we don't want it," an exhausted Mosley told Town Topics. "Nottingham did a fantastic job on the boards, both offensively and defensively. They outplayed us on the boards."

"Another factor was that Nottingham has been there before. They qualified for the state tournament last season."

"We got a little wrapped up in the atmosphere of the state tournament. It was a learning experience for our underclassmen. Too bad it's the final go round for our seniors."

Early Lead

Princeton jumped out to an early 7-1 lead behind senior forward Bobby Davison. After a timeout, the Northstars quickly retook the lead at 9-7. It was a lead they never relinquished.

The Northstars led by as much as 21 points in the third quarter at 59-38. They were almost perfect, 24-for-25, at the charity stripe, and posted four players in double figures. Brian Nixon poured in 24 points, and Yves Terilus scored 23. Willie Jackson and Larry Upshur added 15 points apiece.

Davison carried the team on his back Thursday, scoring 34 points, including two treys. It just wasn't enough to counter Nottingham's inside/ outside attack.

"He is the best player in the CVC because of what he does on both ends of the court." Mosley commented. "He was asked to do a lot for us this year, and as the season went on, he assumed more responsibility."

"His game is just beginning to develop," Mosley continued. "In college he will play some of his best basketball."

He is being scouted by The College of New Jersey, Kean College, and Rowan College.

Davison, Buddy Thomas, Jacob Ulitti, Joe Tucholski, Tony Cipriano, and Bill Freeman all played their final game in a Tigers uniform. Mosley said it wasn't an easy pill for them to swallow.

"It's very difficult for the seniors to have the season come to an end so abruptly," he explained. "They're going through a period of trying to sort through emotions."

"Our underclassmen need to reflect on what is needed to get back to this level again next season.

—Steve Allen

Poetry and Jazz Featured in Program At the Arts Council

The Arts Council of Princeton and the Princeton Public Library have "doubled up" to present "The Double Up: Jazz and Poetry," a program featuring Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Yusef Komunyakaa and jazz duo Susie Ibarra and Craig Taborn.

Lovers of poetry and lovers of jazz will cross paths in the Arts Council's Loft Studio on Sunday afternoon, March 11, at 4, when Prof. Komunyakaa, of Princeton University's Council of the Humanities and Creative Writing Program, will read from his numerous published works of poetry, including his most recent volume, Pleasure Dome; New and Collected Poems (Wesleyan 2001). Performing accompaniment and also on their own will be Susie Ibarra on percussion and Craig Taborn on piano.

Yusef Komunyakaa

Yusef Komunyakaa has been publishing works of poetry, translation, and criticism for the past two decades. He has also performed on numerous recordings featuring his lyrics. Among his published collections of poetry is Talking Dirty to the Gods which was just nominated for the National Book Critics Circle Award for Poetry.

Prof. Komunyakaa also coedited The Jazz Poetry Anthology, collaborated as a librettist, and performed his poetry, accompanied by musicians in performance, on the CDs "Blues Jumped the Rabbit" and "Love Notes from the Madhouse." He is the recipient of numerous other honors, including the William Faulkner Prize, and in 1999 was elected a Chancellor of the Academy of American Poets.

Susie Ibarra

Susie Ibarra plays a vast array of percussion instruments including the Philippine Kulintang and the Javanese and Balinese Gamelan. She was named "best drummer" by the Village Voice in 1999. According to Modern Drummer, "Ms. Ibarra is absolutely explosive behind the drumset. [She] epitomizes a player painting with rhythmic colors."

Pianist Craig Taborn divides his time between composition, electronic performance, and acoustic piano performance. He has performed on numerous recordings and plays regularly with Roscoe Mitchell and James Carter, among others.

Susie Ibarra

He also leads a trio and a quartet and is currently collaborating on a recording project with guitarist Nicky Skopelitis.

"The Double Up" is the second in a series of performances cosponsored by the Arts Council of Princeton and the Princeton Public Library in a series entitled "Live! At the Library: Building Cultural Communities." This collaboration between the two organizations enables them to bring to Princeton a diverse group of artists, writers, and scholars who lead explorations of identity and crossing borders.

"The Double Up" is being presented at no charge, and the public is invited. The Arts Council is located at 102 Witherspoon Street in downtown Princeton.

M'Linda Sims to Appear At Princeton Library

M'Linda Sims will cover more than three centuries of black history in music, in a program on March 10, at 2, at the Princeton Public Library, 65 Witherspoon Street.

Ms. Sims, a professional vocalist, will present a free program entitled, "The African-American Experience Through Music," as part of the library's Intergenerational Series.

Through story and song, she will trace African-American music from its spiritual beginnings in the 1600's, to today's hip-hop sounds. In between, there will be gospel, jazz, rhythm and blues and funk.

"Black music is African-American history," says Ms. Sims, who presents similar programs in schools throughout the region. "It also provides us with a musical backdrop for all of American history. By understanding the music of a people, students understand better the people who give birth to the music and the period of time in which they lived."

Designed for young people and their not-so-young friends, the library's Intergenerational Series will continue on March 18, with a performance by the Urban Celtic duo, with step-dancer Libby Bliss.

Prayer Meetings

meeting in Borough Hall, said Mr. Herbert, would send the impermissible message that the government endorses a particular religion or religious group.

While Mr. Herbert held that the use of municipal facilities for actual prayer meetings would violate the Establishment Clause, Deborah Jacobs, executive director of the ACLU-NJ, said religious services may be held in public facilities. Mr. Herbert said he was surprised by the ACLU position, which he said was contrary to decisions in similar cases throughout the country.

At last Tuesday night's meeting of Mayor and Council, the Borough attorney reiterated his position that the use of Borough Hall for the actual conduct of a religious service is impermissible. "We have a disagreement with Ms. Jacobs at ACLU," he said. "There is nothing wrong with religious groups using a government building. The issue is whether to allow religious groups to conduct services."

He said he was not aware of any other towns that allowed prayer services to be held in their municipal buildings.

Council members, however, differed with Mr. Herbert.

Ryan Stark Lilienthal said that if the Council were to get involved in defining a fine line between secular and religious activities it would become entangled in religious conduct. "It makes more sense to recognize a free speech issue," he said.

"I share that concern," said Councilwoman Mildred Trotman. "Why would we want to put more restrictions on religious groups than on any other groups given permission to use Borough Hall?"

Mr. Herbert persevered. "If we allow this prayer service to be undertaken it means that any church or religious group in town could conduct religious services. We are getting into the area of municipal facilities being made available for primarily religious observance."

The topic turned from the sacred to the profane when Councilman Roger Martindell voiced concern about potential lawsuits. He said that from a public policy point of view the Borough should not encourage lawsuits, and noted that Mr. Lombardo had threatened to sue, "maybe with the assistance of the ACLU.

"I suggest we not pick this fight," he said. "We will lose substantial legal fees and a reputation for tolerance."

Several Council members commented about the number of signs at Borough Hall directing people to Mr. Lombardo's prayer meetings. It was agreed that signs would be handled by the Borough staff and would be limited to directionals.

Rev. Lombardo was elated by Council's response and immediately scheduled a Monday night, March 5, Thanksgiving prayer meeting in Borough Hall to thank God for the decision by Mayor and Council.

Teen Struck by Car On Nassau Street

A 15-year-old Princeton Borough juvenile was transported to Helene Fuld Medical Center Monday after being struck by a vehicle on Nassau Street.

Police said a 2000 Black Plymouth Neon, driven by Romona Krudysz, 37, Witherspoon Street, was traveling west on Nassau Street, and was approaching the intersection of Bank Street, when the juvenile tried to cross the street against the "Don't Walk" sign. The front end of the car struck him, sending him airborne.

According to one eyewitness at the scene, the juvenile got up and started to run away. A passerby stopped his vehicle, and laid the teen in his car until the ambulance arrived.

He was transported to Helene Fuld with contusions and abrasions on his face and right knee.

21st Century Is the Topic Of Univ. Lecture

Elizabeth Bailey, the holder of a 1972 Princeton Ph.D. in economics, will present "A Regulatory Framework for the 21st Century" at 4 on Sunday, March 11, in Helm Auditorium, 50 McCosh Hall, Princeton University.

Prof. Bailey chairs the Department of Public Policy and Management at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania and is the John Hower Professor of Public Policy and Management there. She is one of this country's foremost experts on the deregulation of the airline industry and the interface between business and government.

In an article on "A Regulatory Framework for the 21st Century" published in the Eastern Economic Journal in summer 1999, she wrote, "A new millennium for the world's population waits just around the corner. Public policies aimed at human safety, environmental quality, and mitigation of economic harm will become global requirements, irrespective of geography or politics. The design of these policies — the balance between the role of government and of market forces — is a major challenge facing the 21st century."

She previously was dean of the Graduate School of Industrial Administration at Carnegie Mellon University, commissioner and vice chair of the Civil Aeronautics Board, and head of economic research at Bell Laboratories. She is a trustee of the Brookings Institution and the National Bureau of Economic Research and a former University trustee.

The free talk is part of a year-long series called "Frontiers of Knowledge" that celebrates the centennial of the Princeton University Graduate School by bringing in distinguished alumni to make presentations.

Big Band Dance Set At Princeton High

On Friday evening, March 9 at 7, Anthony Biancosino will conduct the Princeton High School Studio Band for an evening of dancing to their selections of big band tunes from the 1940s at the high school on Moore Street.

The band has won gold medals at the Toronto International Jazz Festival and the Berklee Jazz Festival in Boston. Last year, it won first place at America's Best High School Jazz competition in Washington, D. C.

Admission will be $5 at the door. Proceeds will go towards the band's expenses for trips to jazz competitions in the spring and a return to the International Jazz Festival in Toronto.

Dances will also be held on April 6 and May 4.

HOW DOES YOUR GARDEN GROW?

Do you want to get your garden off to a clean start? Begin with Seeds of Change – the finest open-pollinated, certified organic seeds available.

WHY CHOOSE ORGANIC SEEDS?
Large amounts of chemicals are used in the raising of conventional seeds. Before their sale, they are often coated with a fertilizer, pesticide, or fungicide. Raised on certified organic farms, seeds from Seeds of Change are free of added toxins & pesticides. By selecting Seeds of Change, gardeners can support small organic farmers & keep unwanted chemicals out of their garden.

WHY OPEN-POLLINATION?
Commercial hybrids are rapidly replacing traditional 'open-pollinated' varieties. This means scientists are now doing what the bees, birds, & wind do best. These hybrids are often developed to emphasize traits – such as longer shelf life – that benefit commercial food production. In the process, nutrition & flavor may be compromised. Seeds of Change chooses plants for their superior flavor, productivity, & nutritional value. They offer many varieties of Heirlooms & Native Traditionals selected over generations by farmers around the world. Choosing Seeds of Change represents a commitment to maintaining diversity in the food chain & variety on the dinner table.

Memorial contributions may be made to Peter Putnam Memorial Fund, Unitarian-Universalist Congregation of Princeton, 50 Cherry Hill Road, Princeton 08540; Recording for the Blind and Dyslexic; or Meals on Wheels Program, American Red Cross, 707 Alexander Road, Suite 101, Princeton 08540.

Robin Letitia Wightman, 50, of Princeton, died March 2 in the Memorial Hospital, Easton, Md. The cause of death was metastatic liver cancer originating in breast cancer, a disease she had fought for years.

She was born in Princeton, the only child of Anna-Greta Wightman and Arthur Strong Wightman.

She attended public school in Princeton and also spent a year at a lycee in Orsay, France. She graduated from Princeton High School in 1967. She studied at Stanford University, but her stay in Palo Alto culminated in a B.A. only after several years' extension caused by the turmoil of the Vietnam War. Part of that time was spent herding cattle in Utah.

She moved to the Eastern Shore of Maryland in 1973 and joined Environmental Concern, a company that specialized in repairing damaged salt marshes and in preparing environmental impact statements for projected nuclear plants.

She was later employed at the Neighborhood Service Center in Easton where she became involved in education for children, youths, and adults. She was also involved with the Maritime Museum in Saint Michaels and the YMCA in Easton.

At the YMCA in Easton this summer, her work will be recognized by the dedication of an addition to the building, the Clarke-Wightman wing.

On March 25, her ashes will be sprinkled on the waters of the Choptank River Estuary.

Theodore M. Schoenfeld, 93, of Cranbury, died March 4 at Princeton Medical Center.

He was a founding member and officer of the Princeton Ethical Humanist Fellowship and had been active in the American Ethical Union for a half century, previously as a member and officer of the Brooklyn Ethical Society.

An industrial engineer, he managed consulting assignments for many companies over several decades. He was executive vice president of Ramco, Inc., a producer of safety devices for the chemical industry. He was honored several times for developing advances in this field. Though not a chemist, he was elected to the boards of directors of the New Jersey and the American Institutes of Chemistry.

Earlier in life he had worked on the rewrite desk of the New York Times and in the motion picture industry. During World War II he worked in the War Department in Washington.

In recent years Mr. Schoenfeld served as a Medicaid and Medicare counselor in the SHIP proram at the Princeton Senior Resource Center and was honored nationally for his work there.

Husband of the late Lila Schoenfeld, who died in 1992, he is survived by his son, Edward, of New York, and two grandsons.

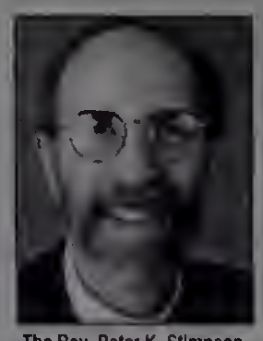
Family Advice Column:

FACING DEATH - Part II

By the Rev. Peter K. Stimpson



The Rev. Peter K. Stimpson

QUESTION: I have a close friend who is dying. What must he be feeling and how can I help?

ANSWER: Last time, we looked at the stages of denial, anger, and bargaining. Now, we shall look at depression and acceptance, keeping in mind that this process of facing death is not an orderly sequence, but rather one where your friend must deal with all 5 aspects at once, the level of acceptance gradually increasing over time.

DEPRESSION: As the disease process inexorably and insidiously worsens, with pain increasing and the quality of life decreasing, trips to the doctor or hospital seem ever so futile, and the inevitability of what is approaching falls upon your friend like a heavy blanket of depression.

Incredibly, when he most needs people, many shy away from him, scared to face their own mortality, and soothing their hidden guilt by dismissing him with "I'll be praying for you", their prayers ringing hollow without being backed up by the actions of writing, calling, visiting, or feeding him.

Even those who do visit, working through their own sense of denial, may nervously give false reassurances that "it'll be OK", when they know that is just not true. Your friend then feels increasingly alone, and his depression deepens.

Therefore, friends like you need to let him air his feelings, and give him honest feedback, helping him prepare for death. When he looks back to assess his life, if his mind lingers on past mistakes, or if he doubts his worth at home or work, you can help him to more realistically view the lasting impact that he has had upon his wife, children, and those whom he met during his career. He will then see his value mirrored back to him through your caring eyes. Also, if he is scared of too much pain, you can get a doctor to talk to him about what can be done.

And, as strange as this sounds, he needs to focus more on the good than the bad. The negatives are all-too-evident, being rudely shoved "right in his face". But, to dwell on them gets him nowhere. Instead, help him to focus on what is genuinely good in his life: the love of his family and God, the warmth of the sun on his face or coffee on his palate, the softness of a robe, clean sheets on his bed, flowers from a friend, and you — these are real, but often missed in our hectic world. Now he has time to notice the small things, and that will make a large difference.

ACCEPTANCE: Gradually, he is drawn to face his death because it is constantly looming before him, and those honest talks with you, as well as with God, his pastor, and his wife move him from seeing death as an end to seeing that it is a transition to a new beginning. Having reflected upon his life, he begins to see and accept the maturation of his soul, his chosen ability to connect with and love others being an inner treasure that death cannot touch. He then becomes not scared of death, but only of the process of dying.

Ironically, when is is physically at his weakest, the strength of his spirit is now able to move mountains. Those cynics, atheists, and agnostics who cross his path and expect him to abandon his faith as life abandons him are confronted with a person whose hard-won resolve and firm belief smash the false ideologies upon which they stand. Knowing that a dying man rarely lies, years of unsuccessful pleading from family are now dwarfed by the simple faith of a dying man.

And finally, realizing that the last breath he takes on earth will be followed by the first breath he will take in heaven, your friend is enabled to let go of one life so as to embrace another.

Seward Johnson, Sr. Charitable Trusts. *If you would like Father Stimpson to answer a question of yours on family life, daily living or emotional health, you can write to him at: Trinity Counseling Service, 22 Stockton Street, Princeton, NJ 08540. By Tod Peyton

THE "FIXER-UPPER"

Most buyers want a home that is in tip-top condition and ready for them to occupy, but many homes go for bargain prices because they need work. Buyers love "fixer-uppers" for the obvious reasons: the price and the satisfaction of designing something attractive. Whether you are buying the property for yourself or as an investment, choose a house that is in a good location and structurally sound. It should be priced enough below market value to allow plenty of room for a profitable re-sale after the work is completed.

It is important to educate yourself before taking on such a project. For example, inexpensive cosmetic improvements often give the greatest return — paint will increase the value three times for every dollar invested. Landscaping, carpeting, and light fixtures are also relatively inexpensive improvements. Expensive structural improvements, such as a new roof, plumbing, wiring, or foundation repairs, usually add very little to the market value of a home.

Remodeling a kitchen will rarely add more than the cost, but new appliances usually give a fine return. An extra bathroom is the best renovation from an investment point of view, often giving twice its cost in added value; the worst investment is a swimming pool.

Monthly payments are for 30-year conventional fixed rate mortgages as detailed below. Please ask about: Lower Downpayments • Lower Monthly Payments • Other Options.
For purchase prices up to $343,750 monthly mortgage payments (principal + interest) quoted in our ads are to qualified buyers, based upon a 20% downpayment and a conventional 30-year fixed rate loan at 6.625% with 3 points. A.P.R. 6.978%. As an example, a $100,000 loan would mean 360 monthly payments of $640.31. For purchase prices from $343,751 to $812,500, the monthly payments are to qualified buyers based upon a 20% downpayment and calculated at 7.125% with 2 points on a "Jumbo" 30-year fixed rate mortgage with an A.P.R. of 7.443%. An example of a $500,000 loan would mean 360 monthly payments of $3,308.59. Figures herein are approximate and do not include property taxes, hazard insurance, or homeowners association dues for a condominium purchase.
